

- 1999: Killing of Diallo and Filing of Daniels

After the killing of Amadou Diallo by the NYPD Street Crimes Unit, CCR and others file Daniels v. City of New York, challenging the constitutionality of the stop and frisk practices of the NYPD Street Crimes Unit along with the National Congress for Puerto Rican Rights and MXGM members as Plaintiffs.

- 2003: Daniels Settlement

We settle with NYPD who agrees to disband the Unit, and adopt and a written policy against racial profiling and stop and frisk paperwork audit system. In the years since, the number of stops and frisks skyrockets, with the vast majority of stops in communities of color.

- 2008: Floyd v. the City of NY

CCR and co-counsel file Floyd v. the City of New York, a federal class action lawsuit that challenges the NYPD's practices of racial profiling and unconstitutional stops and frisks. We receive and make public detailed data from the NYPD about its use of stops.

- March - May 2013: Trial in Floyd

Impacted community members pack the court for 9 weeks of trial. Over 100 witnesses testify.

August 12, 2013: LANDMARK VICTORY!

A federal judge finds NYPD liable for a widespread practice of unconstitutional and racially discriminatory stops and frisks. She appoints an independent monitor to oversee a process for developing reforms that must include the input of communities most heavily impacted by stop and frisk.

- August - October 2013: City Appeals

The City appeals to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and asks to halt the reform process. The Police unions file motions to intervene in the case. In response, a broad base of New Yorkers files declarations about the importance of the reform process.

- October - December 2013: Appeals Court Temporarily Halts Reform Process

A three-judge panel for the Second Circuit Court of Appeals halts the reform process and removes the district court judge from the case but does not overturn the August rulings on liability and remedy. There is public outcry over the judge's removal. CCR and others, including the judge, file motions for reconsideration before the entire Appeals Court. Mayor-elect Bill de Blasio promises to drop the appeals once he enters office. The Court puts on hold the police unions' motions to intervene in order to give de Blasio and the Floyd plaintiffs the chance to try to resolve the case in early 2014. The outgoing mayoral administration files a merits brief for the appeal.

- January 2014 - September 2015: Agreement Announced

In January 2014, Mayor de Blasio and Floyd legal team announce agreement to drop appeal and move forward with reforms. The District Court denies the police unions' motions to intervene and agrees to modify the August 2013 remedial order by defining the term of the court-ordered Monitor. The City of New York formally withdraws their appeal.

-2015 - present: Joint Remedial Process Begins

In 2015, CCR begins meeting with the court-appointed Monitor and Facilitator to discuss immediate reforms and the joint reform process (JRP).

JOINT REMEDIAL PROCESS IN FLOYD V. CITY OF NY: A CLOSER LOOK

In August 2013, a federal judge found that the New York Police Department (NYPD) had engaged in a widespread practice of unconstitutional and racially discriminatory stops and frisks and ordered a collaborative, joint remedial process (JRP) to develop a set of reforms that will help bring the NYPD's stop-and-frisk practices into compliance with the Constitution. The judge highlighted the importance of getting this input, writing at the time, "No amount of legal or policing expertise can replace a community's understanding of the likely practical consequences of reforms in terms of both liberty and safety."

The JRP ensures that communities who have been directly affected by these practices will have direct input into shaping the future of stop and frisk in New York. The JRP was envisioned to solicit ideas for additional reforms from communities most impacted by stops and frisks. In addition to community stakeholders, the process will involve the City, members of law enforcement, local elected officials, organizations with expertise in policing and criminal justice attorneys representing the plaintiffs. This process echoes a similar process successfully implemented in Cincinnati, Ohio over a decade ago to address systemic abusive and biased policing practices. Guiding this process is the court-appointed Facilitator, Hon. Ariel Belen.

Throughout the JRP, the Center for Constitutional Rights (CCR), as lead counsel for the Floyd Plaintiffs, will continue to work with the Facilitator to ensure a meaningful and robust process.

KEY MOMENTS AND ANTICIPATED TIMELINE FOR FLOYD JOINT REMEDIAL PROCESS:

The Joint Remedial Process is comprised of several activities:

- September 2015: Launch of JRP Advisory Committee

The Committee, which is comprised of JRP stakeholders including Floyd Plaintiffs; representatives from affected communities, including members of Communities United for Police Reform; NYPD leadership; and religious and academic leaders, was convened to advise Judge Belen and his staff on how to structure the JRP.

- October 2015 – February 2016: Convening of Focus Groups

40 focus groups, each comprised of eight to ten members from communities across the city, were convened by Judge Belen and his staff, in collaboration with several grassroots organizations around the City, to elicit input on potential reforms.

- October – December 2016: Community Forums

28 community forums were held throughout New York City in order to afford the public the opportunity to weigh in on reforms proposed, and comment on themes and findings from the focus groups. Nine of these forums were organized by Communities United for Police Reform.

- Fall 2016 – February 2017: Leadership Meetings

Judge Belen and his team held a series of informal "leadership" meetings with representatives with some of the JRP stakeholder groups as well as organizations with expertise in criminal justice and / or policing to solicit additional ideas for potential reforms.

- March 2017: Facilitator Finalizes and Submits Report

The facilitator will draft a final report with recommended reforms compiled from the input-gathering process and submit to the court by March 31, 2017.

Flip over to learn more about how we got here.