The Periodic Review Board, by consensus, determined that continued law of war detention of the detainee is no longer necessary to protect against a continuing significant threat to the security of the United States. The Board recognizes that the detainee presents some level of threat in light of his past activities, skills, and associations; however, the Board found that in light of the factors and the conditions identified below, the risk the detainee presents can be adequately mitigated.

In making this determination, the Board considered the detainee's candor with the Board, his acknowledgement and acceptance of responsibility for his past activities, and his lack of extremist views. The Board also noted the detainee's detailed plan for the future and extensive family and outside support as detailed by his private counsel, the detainee's record of compliance while at Guantanamo and history of positive engagement with the guard force, and the detainee's efforts to improve himself while in detention by taking advantage of educational classes.

The Board recommends repatriation to Algeria due to the detainee's strong family support and Algeria's strong track record in prior transfers, with security appropriate security assurances as negotiated by the Special Envoys and agreed to by relevant USG departments and agencies.
