

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
OCTOBER TERM, 2008

NO. 07-1015

JOHN D. ASHCROFT, FORMER ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES, AND ROBERT MUELLER, DIRECTOR OF THE
FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION,

Petitioners,

v.

JAVAID IQBAL, ET AL.,

Respondents.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE BRIEF FOR AMICI
CURIAE IBRAHIM TURKMEN, ASIF-UR-REHMAN
SAFFI, YASSER EBRAHIM, HANY IBRAHIM, SHAKIR BALOCH, AKHIL SACHDEVA AND ASHRAF IBRAHIM IN SUPPORT OF
RESPONDENT JAVAID IQBAL

Ibrahim Turkmen, Asif-Ur-Rehman Saffi, Yasser Ebrahim, Hany Ibrahim, Shakir Baloch, Akhil Sachdeva and Ashraf Ibrahim hereby move this Court, pursuant to Rule 37.3, for leave to file the attached brief amicus curiae in support of respondent Javaid Iqbal. The petitioners and respondent Iqbal have consented to the filing of this brief, along with respondents Kenneth Maxwell, David Rardin and Dennis Hasty, but respondents Michael Rolince, Katherine Hawk Sawyer, and Michael Cooksey have declined to consent. Correspondence reflecting the consents has been lodged with the Clerk.

Amici are plaintiffs in an action entitled Turkmen, et al. v. Ashcroft, et al. pending in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York (02 CV 2307 (JG) (SMG)), asserting claims against petitioners and others similar to the claims in the instant case, and consolidated with the instant case for discovery. Appeals in Turkmen by petitioners and others to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit from an order of the District Court denying in part their motion to dismiss the complaint were argued in February, 2008, and are now awaiting decision. Petitioners make many of the same arguments on their appeals in Turkmen as they do before this Court.

Like respondent Iqbal, amici are non-citizens arrested following September 11, 2001, and detained as “of interest” to the FBI’s investigation of the terrorist attacks. All were eventually cleared of any connection to terrorism, and removed from the United States under the Immigration and Naturalization Act. The only amicus charged with or convicted of any criminal act is Shakir Baloch, who pled guilty to possession of false documents.

Like respondent Iqbal, amici believe (and allege in Turkmen) that while in custody they were subjected to punitive conditions of confinement on the basis of their race and religion. Like respondent, amici allege that their treatment was part of a nationwide pattern, described in reports of the Office of the Inspector General of the Department of Justice, directed by petitioners Ashcroft and Mueller.

In this brief, amici offer supplementary arguments against imposing a special pleading standard for claims against “high-ranking officials.” They also present to the Court material, obtained during discovery in their action and Iqbal’s of parties other than petitioners, which illustrates information that has already appeared concerning petitioners’ role in this nationwide pattern of conduct, as well as avenues for further discovery of that role. They submit that this material shows that an injustice would be done if Iqbal’s claims were dismissed without an opportunity to take the limited discovery contemplated by the Second Circuit’s decision.

INTEREST OF THE AMICI CURIAE

The interest of the amici curiae is set forth in the foregoing Motion for Leave to File.¹

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

On this appeal, petitioners wash their hands of the discriminatory treatment of respondent, amici, and hundreds of other Muslim non-citizens, maintaining that if petitioners' subordinates acted inappropriately, this Court should assume petitioners were not involved. In so doing, petitioners urge the Court to require plaintiffs asserting racial and religious discrimination claims against "high-ranking officials" to detail the specific methods and tools of governmental discrimination: where meetings occurred; who spoke; and what was said, to adequately plead a case. Respondent Iqbal did not have access to such detail when this case was filed. But detail is emerging now. Amici share with the Court the fruits of discovery in this case and Turkmen, to illustrate how it is precisely claims against "high-ranking officials" which require discovery to uncover the details.

Petitioners maintain that the protection of a vaguely defined class of "high-ranking officials" from "frivolous lawsuits" requires a special rule available to no other defendant, or potential defendant. Beyond the sanctions of Rule 11; beyond demands for particulars; beyond motions for summary judgment; beyond even the qualified immunity available in appropriate circumstances to any government employee—beyond all this, we are told, “high-ranking officials” require the special protection of a special rule of pleading.

This Court has already rejected that argument, raised by dissenting Justices Black and Blackmun in Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents of Federal Bureau of Narcotics, 403 U.S. 388 (1971), and subsequent history has not vindicated the dissenters’ fears. Petitioners rest their case on a single example, former Attorney General Edward Levi (Pet. Br. at 40-41). In fact, petitioners’ own source for General Levi’s experience demonstrates the minimal burden imposed by Bivens: all of the suits were resolved without Attorney General Levi having to testify, even in a deposition, and the Justice Department thought it unnecessary even to tell the Attorney General about most of the suits. See below, at 20-23.

The present case makes an odd vehicle for petitioners’ renewal of this argument. At issue here is not a small or local operation, in which it is plausible to suppose the heads of the Department of Justice and the FBI had no role, but a massive, nationwide program in which petitioners played a prominent, public part. Press conferences and public speeches by petitioners regarding the 9/11 investigation as it proceeded are noted in the April 2003 report of the Justice Department’s Office of the Inspector General.² Meetings and conversations of other senior Department of Justice and FBI officials are scattered throughout that report; to suppose that all of this activity took place without the participation of petitioners strains the imagination.³

But in seeking to discover what senior officials were responsible for their treatment, respondent and amici face the same problem as anyone investigating a large, complex operation: the underlings may be easily identified, but proceeding up the chain of command requires diligence and patience. If the details of higher-ups' conduct had to be set out at the beginning of an investigation, a wide variety of investigations would be sharply curtailed.

Here, discovery already conducted in the district court, limited as it has been to discovery from non-parties and parties not claiming qualified immunity, further indicates the involvement of petitioners in the discriminatory arrest and detention of 9/11 detainees, which additional discovery is needed to clarify. As set forth below, an Immigration and Naturalization Service manual required detailed daily reports to the Attorney General, and states that the Attorney General used those reports to brief other senior officials; but the reports themselves (with the exception of one sample included in the manual) have not been produced. See below, at 9-12. Documents from the FBI files of amici indicate that the tips which led to their arrest and classification as “of interest” singled them out by race and religion; this was not merely an occasional occurrence but the result of a policy to detain without vetting individuals encountered in the course of an investigation driven by 96,000 public tips, almost all of which evidently proved worthless to the investigation.⁴ See below, at 7-8. More investigation is required to determine whether petitioners directed that Muslim and Arab men be treated as “of interest” to the terrorism investigation without regard to any evidence connecting them to terrorism, or merely acquiesced to their subordinates’ biased investigation. See below, at 14-20.

These inquiries are not frivolous; the OIG Report documents the serious issues raised by the government’s treatment of 9/11 detainees like Iqbal and amici. And with all due respect to petitioners, whose public service as “officials charged with protecting our nation” amici recognize: their public service only entitles them to immunity provided they acted reasonably. This Court rejected absolute immunity for the Attorney General, along with other executive officials short of the President, in Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511 (1985). It should not now use a special pleading rule to create an effective equivalent to absolute immunity by making it impossible to plead a claim against “high-ranking officials” without the aid of discovery, and impossible to attain an opportunity to take discovery without inside knowledge of detailed workings at the highest levels of government at the time of filing a complaint.

ARGUMENT

I. Respondent Adequately Alleges Petitioners' Involvement in Classifying Amici and Respondent Based on Race and Religion.

There is ample ground to suspect racial and religious discrimination in the treatment of respondent, amici, and other 9/11 detainees; the District Court and Court of Appeals refused to dismiss respondent's equal protection claim, and that action is not challenged here. Petitioners say only that they should not be held to account for any discrimination—not because there was no discrimination, or even because they had no role in such discrimination, but because respondent's complaint fails to show that petitioners' involvement is "plausible."

Petitioners argue that the context of this case—"the government's response to an unprecedented national-security crisis . . . [in which the] former Attorney General and current Director of the FBI . . . headed the largest investigation in American history"—demands dismissal prior to discovery because respondent has not properly alleged the "particular steps" petitioners took to approve, condone or ratify the discriminatory policy, including when, where, and with whom the actions occurred. Pet. Br. at 13, 39. They dismiss the circumstantial evidence that race and religion were the predominant factors in 9/11 arrests, reasoning:

[I]f petitioners were aware that a high proportion of Arab or Muslim men were among the detainees “of high interest,” that alone would not have given them cause to believe that the list reflected racial or religious discrimination—any more than would a predominance of Irish suspects in an investigation of the IRA.

Pet. Br. at 35. The analogy is interesting; but it requires development. If 762 Irishmen were arrested in such an investigation; if almost all were arrested on the basis of tips from the public, in circumstances in which a general public hostility to the Irish might be feared; if none of the 762 proved to have an actual connection to the IRA; would it then be implausible to suspect that those running the investigation were infected by bias? And would it be appropriate to shield them from any liability for bias, unless detailed evidence of bias could be put forward at the very beginning of a lawsuit?

Petitioners rely heavily on an assumption that, given the size of the 9/11 investigation, “there is every reason to assume that the Attorney General and the Director of the FBI did not personally do more than . . . approve a general policy of using highly restrictive confinement for any detainee ‘of high interest’” to the terrorism investigation. Pet. Br. at 36-37 (emphasis in the original). Discovery conducted thus far, however, tells a different story.

Amici agree with respondent that Iqbal’s complaint is adequately pled under settled Supreme Court precedent. In the context of this case—a critical investigation conceived and implemented at the very highest levels of government—no additional detail is necessary to buttress the plausibility of respondent's allegations.

But as it happens, the detail petitioners demand, though unavailable to respondent prior to discovery, is now emerging. Through the usual means, amici have uncovered significant factual material regarding the who, what, where and when of petitioners' personal involvement in the discriminatory actions challenged by respondent. Amici share this material with the Court to illuminate the probable result of the new rule urged by petitioners: the precipitous dismissal of a significant and meritorious challenge to illegal and discriminatory action by high-ranking government officials for failure to plead details that can only be uncovered through the process of discovery detailed in the Federal Rules.

A. Amici, Respondent, and Other 9/11 Detainees Were Classified Based on Their Race and Religion.

As a threshold matter, it is clear that the 9/11 detentions involved racial and religious profiling. The OIG Report recounts how the FBI's watch list of "more than 100 names" was supplemented within a week by "more than 96,000 tips or potential leads from the public." OIG Report at 11-12. In the resulting investigation the government arrested and detained thousands of Muslims (Complaint ¶ 47; Pet. App. 164a) from Middle Eastern or South Asian countries (OIG Report at 21). The OIG Report illustrates the quality of the tips: a store is "operated by numerous Middle Eastern men Too many people to run a small store"; an alien who "would like to learn how to fly an airplane"; Middle Eastern men with “pictures of the World Trade Center and other famous buildings.” Id. at 16-17. Race is conspicuous; and facts plausibly suggesting a connection to terrorism are absent.

The implications of these facts regarding the role of pervasive discrimination in the treatment of respondent, amici, and the other 9/11 detainees are underscored by documentation, produced by the United States in Turkmen, of the tips which led to amici’s treatment as “of interest.” Amici Hany Ibrahim and Yasser Ebrahim were reported to authorities as “Middle Eastern Males . . . renting a mailbox and possibly sending out large quantities of money.” Affirmation of Michael Winger made October 30, 2008, ¶ 3, Exh. A; see attached Appendix at 1a (hereafter, the affirmation and its exhibits are referred to by the page of the appendix, in the form _a). Amicus Ashraf Ibrahim was described as one of “three males, who appeared to be Arabs,” who sought to purchase a used truck to carry water and gave “vague” answers to questions about what kind of containers the water would be carried in and whom they would deliver it to. 4a. Amicus Baloch was “a male, possibly Arab,” with a fake Social Security card. 7a. Amicus Sachdeva was said to have been speaking in Arabic (although in fact he is a Hindu from India), and to have talked about “flying and flight simulators.” 8a. Amicus Saffi, a Pakistani by birth, appears to have been arrested solely because he had been refused admission to Canada. 12a. There is nothing to show a reason for suspicion of amicus Turkmen in the FBI file produced by the United States except a tip concerning three other Turkish men, apparently based on their being Turkish. 14a-16a.

B. Discovery Supports Petitioners' Awareness of the Biased Nature of the 9/11 Sweeps.

Petitioners disavow knowledge of or involvement in the biased nature of the 9/11 sweeps, (Pet. Br. at 5), but discovery paints a different picture. According to a document produced by the United States in this action and Turkmen, the Commissioner of the INS submitted a daily "Attorney General Report" to petitioner Ashcroft, detailing information relevant to the 9/11 investigation.⁵ Among other relevant statistics, the report details the number of aliens taken into custody each day along with the "number of aliens taken into custody during joint field interviews after which it is determined there is no nexus to the investigation." 20a. According to the deposition testimony of Walter Cadman, the Director of the National Security Unit ("NSU") of the INS, the latter figure probably represented aliens who were arrested in connection to the terrorism investigation, and thus treated as terrorist suspects, for whom it was eventually determined the FBI lacked any investigative interest.⁶ Mr. Cadman distinguished such aliens, who were “swept up” in the investigation as “collateral arrests,” from those in whom the FBI originally had a genuine investigative interest, but later cleared of any connection to terrorism.⁷

Each Attorney General Report also includes a “notes” section that calls for a narration of “events relevant to the criminal investigation and the mission of the INS,” to be used by the Commissioner and the Attorney General to prepare for daily briefings with the National Security Council and the President.⁸ The only Attorney General Report produced thus far recounts that 48 Muslims were held for questioning after they exited a religious service next door to the site of a search warrant operation. 22a. There does not appear to have been any basis to question the individuals other than their appearance and attendance at a religious service.

Amici have reason to believe that the balance of reports will provide even more compelling information. In an interview with the OIG, the NSU personnel responsible for providing information for the “notes” section stated that the Attorney General Reports “showed the details of all aliens in INS custody who had a possible ‘nexus to terrorism.’”⁹

Along these lines, the manual instructs that the “Notes” section of the Attorney General Report is to be drawn from Significant Incident Reports, or “SIRs” and other reports received by the NSU and that the narrative should “err on the side of inclusion.” 19a. SIRs and reports received by the NSU recount the dubious tips that led to each alien’s arrest along with any subsequent FBI investigation. For example, the SIR for amicus Akhil Sachdeva indicates that Sachdeva was encountered during a field operation predicated upon a WTC lead, and states that FBI interest in Sachdeva is currently “undetermined.” 25a.

If the Attorney General Reports contained such details of the tips and investigation, then petitioner Ashcroft had a clear indication that the FBI had no non-discriminatory basis for suspecting amici, respondent, and others of ties to terrorism. While it is not yet clear whether petitioner Mueller also received detailed reports, in his interview with the OIG Mueller acknowledged being aware that a number of people were detained by the INS because of a “pass[ing] assoc[iation] w[ith] Penttbom.”¹⁰ This evidence was unavailable to respondent prior to discovery, and indeed, it appears that the balance of the Attorney General Reports may have been destroyed.¹¹ Thus only deposition testimony may uncover their nature.

It appears that petitioners were also provided lists of the 9/11 detainees that underscored the paucity of evidence connecting many to terrorism. Michael Pearson, INS Executive Associate Commissioner for Field Operations, testified at his deposition:

There was a lot of things going on after September 11 and a lot of high level involvement. I mean commissioner dealing with Attorney General's office, I'm sure the Attorney General's office working with the White House and all that and working with the FBI.

So the information we provided, the significant interest list¹² went over to the department daily. In fact, any time we had a significant update it would go over to it. And because I was presenting it to higher headquarters, I made sure that the chief of staff, the deputy commissioner and the commis-

¹¹ The OIG does not appear to have located the reports despite notes indicating their plan to do so, and counsel for the United States has thus far also been unsuccessful in locating the reports despite amici's request.

¹² In subsequent testimony Pearson said that by "significant interest list" he meant what was usually termed the "special interest list." Transcript of Deposition of Michael Pearson, (to be lodged with the Court pursuant to Rule 32), at 136, marked for lodging as L524.

sioner were aware of it and they were intimately aware.¹³

The “special interest list” provides each suspect’s name, detention location, and a narrative in which the FBI’s interest in and investigation of each detainee is noted.¹⁴ Where there is any information to tie the detainee to a known terrorist, or to the known characteristics of the hijackers, that information was also noted. See e.g. 27a. For example, the narrative summary for alien “A”¹⁵ indicates that he was the co-insurer on an auto insurance policy with one of the hijackers, that he accompanied the hijacker to flight school, and that he served as the hijacker’s interpreter. 27a. Similarly, the narrative summary for alien “B” states that he was an acquaintance of two of the hijackers. 29a.

For amici and respondent, however, no such ties exist, and thus no information appears on the list to explain the FBI’s “interest” in each individual. The entry for Shakir Baloch, for example, states only that he was in possession of a forged license, and will be prosecuted for fraudulent documents and INS reentry. 31a-32a. The entry for Asif Saffi provides no information other than the assignment and reassignment of his case to various agents. 35a.

¹³ Id. at 135-36, marked for lodging as L523-24.

¹⁴ Excerpts from the “Special Interest List” are attached in the Appendix; the entire list produced by the United States is to be lodged with the Court pursuant to Rule 32, marked for lodging as L132-57.

¹⁵ Identifying information regarding detainees other than amici has been redacted.

Finally, the entry for respondent Iqbal indicates that he is being charged criminally for making false statements. 33a. The list, dated 5/13/02, shows that Iqbal remained in custody at Metropolitan Detention Center for months despite an apparent lack of activity on his case after January 31, 2002.¹⁶

C. More Discovery Is Necessary to Determine the Extent to Which Petitioners Directed that the Sweeps Be Carried Out in a Biased Manner.

Discovery in the Turkmen matter has already uncovered some evidence to suggest that petitioners were not only aware of the detainees' lack of connections to terrorism, but also ordered that Muslim and Arab men without true FBI interest be treated as "of interest" to the investigation, and be placed in extraordinarily restrictive conditions of confinement.¹⁷

¹⁷ Besides the "of interest" designations, two other programs instituted by petitioner Ashcroft also singled-out non-citizens based on religion and race. See John Ashcroft, Memorandum to United States Attorneys and Members of the Anti-Terrorism Task Forces on Interviews Regarding International Terrorism (November 9, 2001), <<http://www.usdoj.gov/ag/readingroom/terrorism1.htm>>; U.S. General Accounting Office, Homeland Security: Justice Department's Project to Interview Aliens after September 11, 2001 at 7 (Apr. 11, 2003), <<http://www.gao.gov/new.items/do3459.pdf>> (program to interview selected individuals from fifteen predominantly Muslim countries regarding the terrorist attacks); John Ashcroft, "Prepared Remarks on the National Security Entry-Exit Registration (...continued)

First, a Supervisory Special Agent detailed to the FBI's Office of General Counsel told the OIG that Ashcroft ordered specific individuals placed on the FBI's watchlist, including five Yemenis who lacked the required connection to the 9/11 hijackers.¹⁸

Second, petitioner Ashcroft may have ordered the wholesale inclusion of hundreds of 9/11 detainees from New York onto the national custody list. In New York, every individual arrested in connection to a PENTTBOM lead was held as a 9/11 detainee, yet many of these names were initially not sent to INS headquarters to be included on the national custody list. OIG Report at 53. In October of 2001, INS officials at Headquarters learned of approximately 300 individuals being held in New York as 9/11 detainees. Id. at 53-54. At meetings to discuss merging the New York and national custody lists, several individuals expressed concerns that the New York list had not been properly vetted, and that the FBI could not affirmatively state any interest in many of the detainees. Id. Nevertheless, Stuart

Reg. 2363 (Jan. 16, 2003) (program requiring males over the age of sixteen from twenty-four predominantly Muslim countries plus North Korea to report to immigration offices or face arrest, detention, or deportation).

¹⁸ OIG notes of interview with Supervisory Special Agent (Name Redacted), produced by the United States (to be lodged with the Court pursuant to Rule 32) at 000007, marked for lodging as L82.

Levey, the Associate Deputy Attorney General for immigration, ordered that everyone from the New York list be incorporated into the national list. Id. at 55-56. Walter Cadman, one of the meeting attendees, testified at his deposition that he understood Mr. Levey to be making this decision with the Attorney General's authority.¹⁹

Along with directing the race-based targeting of amici and respondent, there is also reason to believe that petitioners directed, or at least knew of, the policy of subjecting these dubiously identified "of interest" detainees to extremely restrictive conditions of confinement.

First, petitioners' subordinates and colleagues spoke to the OIG of petitioners' personal involvement. Dan Levin, Director Mueller's chief of staff, told the OIG of a "continuous" meeting the first few months after 9/11 involving the Director and the Attorney General, among others.²⁰ According to Principal Associate Deputy Attorney general Christopher Wray, petitioner Ashcroft and a small group mapped out ways to exert "maximum pressure" on the terrorism suspects.²¹ This included delaying their immigration hearings and restricting their ability to contact the outside world.²² "Let's not make it so they can get Johnnie Cochran on the phone,” the OIG notes report.²³ Consistent with these reports, INS Commissioner Ziglar told the OIG that he discussed the “roundup” and the “whole process of interviewing and incarcerating out of status individuals” at a meeting with the Attorney General.²⁴ And petitioner Ashcroft told the OIG that he had been involved in frequent discussion regarding the detainees’ need for counsel, and was aware of at least some of the department’s attempts to address that issue.²⁵

Second, the OIG interviews make clear the extent to which petitioners’ high-level subordinates were involved in decisions regarding detention conditions. Ashcroft’s deputy chief of staff, David Israelite, recalled brainstorming about possible ways to “be aggressive,”²⁶ and the Deputy Attorney General’s chief of staff David Laufman recalled discussions early on about conditions of confine-

Petitioners' personal involvement with the details of detention and treatment is not surprising in the context of the 9/11 investigation. Control over all aspects of the investigation was tightly centralized out of Washington, featuring close involvement of some of the highest ranking federal officials. The FBI's high-security Strategic Information and Operations Center, also known as SIOC, located at FBI Headquarters, became the center of the investigation. OIG Report at 11. Based out of SIOC, federal law enforcement officials quickly identified the hijackers, pursued leads related to them, and began developing a watch list of potential hijackers and other individuals who may have been planning terrorist attacks against America. Id. at 11.

Petitioner Ashcroft, en route to Milwaukee at the time of the attacks, hurriedly returned to Washington and arrived at SIOC by the late morning.²⁹ Petitioner Mueller was already there.³⁰ There began the "continuous" meeting.

²⁹ Steven Brill, After: How America Confronted the September 12 Era, at 14 (2003).

FBI Headquarters tightly controlled all decision making regarding the 9/11 detainees. FBI Headquarters required that the results of all detainee interviews be provided to SIOC. 32a-33a. FBI Headquarters exercised final say on whether a detainee was “of interest” to the 9/11 investigation and cautioned that it was “essential that the decision as to whether or not to seek continued detention is made centrally by headquarters rather than by individual field offices.” Id. FBI Headquarters coordinated CIA names checks on individual detainees, OIG Report at 50, and by October 2001, FBI Headquarters performed the entire investigation and clearance process of the detainees. OIG Report at 48, n.42.

Details such as housing determinations and conditions, typically left to lower level officials in the INS and BOP, were dictated from FBI Headquarters and high levels of the Justice Department. FBI Headquarters requested that individual detainees be moved or placed in restrictive housing.³¹ And DOJ personnel, including David Laufman, chief of staff to the Deputy Attorney General, and Principal Associate Deputy Attorney General Christopher Wray called Kathy Hawk Sawyer, director of the Bureau of Prisons, soon after 9/11 with concerns about detainees’ ability to communicate with other inmates and the public. OIG Report at 112. Hawk Sawyer described the restrictions in place for the 9/11 detainees and Laufman and Wray instructed her “not [to] be in a hurry” to provide 9/11 detainees with access to communications, including legal or social calls or visits, so that the FBI would have a chance to “do their job.”³² OIG Report at 113.

Michael Cooksey, the BOP’s Assistant Director for Correctional Programs, confirmed that instructions and guidance on handling detainees came from the Department [of Justice] and the FBI and that the decision to utilize the Special Housing Unit to hold 9/11 detainees was made in meetings with the DOJ.³³

The factual material described above does not prove petitioners’ liability—but it does provide the detail that petitioners would demand. At this point in discovery—and even without discovery of petitioners—amici can describe much of the who, when, where and how of petitioners’ involvement in the discriminatory classification alleged by respondent. But to demand this level of factual detail prior to discovery is to erect a de facto rule of absolute immunity for “high-ranking officials,” in contradiction to over three decades of Supreme Court precedent.

II. Permitting This Case to Proceed to Discovery Would Not Open the Floodgates to Frivolous Lawsuits.

To support their case for a heightened pleading standard, petitioners raise the specter of a flood of “frivolous lawsuits” haunting “high-ranking officials” even after they leave office. See, e.g., Pet. Br. at 19, 40-41. This Court has already rejected that argument.

The same concern was raised by Justices Black and Blackmun in their dissents in Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents of Federal Bureau of Narcotics, 403 U.S. 388 (1971), suggesting that this Court’s recognition of a right of action against federal officials in their personal capacities for violations of an individual’s constitutional rights would trigger an “avalanche” of litigation. Id. at 430 (Blackmun, J. dissenting). Justice Black wrote that “[w]e sit at the top of a judicial system nearing the point of collapse.” Id. at 429. He feared that an onslaught of “frivolous” lawsuits brought about by Bivens would press the system past the tipping point; moreover, such actions would “tend to stultify proper law enforcement and . . . make the day’s labor for the honest and conscientious officer even more onerous.” Id. at 430.

The majority rejected that argument. Id. at 391 n.4. Justice Harlan observed in his concurrence:

There is, however, something ultimately self-defeating about this argument. For if, as the Government contends, damages will rarely be realized by plaintiffs in these cases . . . then I am not ready to assume that there will be a significant increase in the expenditure of judicial resources on these claims

Id. at 410. “[T]he possibility of ‘frivolous’ claims” is simply insufficient to “warrant[] closing the courthouse doors to people in [respondent’s] situation”—particularly when doing so would effectively insulate those most directly charged with supporting and defending the Constitution from the consequences of violating its principles. Id.

As Justice Harlan anticipated, the justice system has effectively found “other ways . . . of coping with frivolous lawsuits.” Id. The reality is that very few Bivens cases succeed. In the first twelve years following the Bivens decision, only 0.25% of suits against federal officials in their individual capacities resulted in judgments for the plaintiffs. See Perry M. Rosen, “The Bivens Constitutional Tort: An Unfulfilled Promise,” 67 N.C. L. REV 337, 343-345 (1989). The rarity of successful suits should provide sufficient peace of mind to meet Judge Cabranes’s concern that government officials “perform their sensitive duties with decisiveness and without potentially ruinous hesitation.” (Pet. App. 70a) (Cabranes, J. concurring) (quoting Mitchell v. Forsythe, 472 U.S. 511, 541 (1985) (Stevens, J. concurring in the judgment)) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Nor has there been an “avalanche” of Bivens cases. As a former trial attorney in the Civil Division of the Department of Justice who specialized in defending Bivens suits observed, “[t]he paucity of victories for plaintiffs alleging deprivation of their constitutional rights demonstrates, however, more than a propensity by the general public to bring frivolous lawsuits against federal officials. It reflects, instead, problems endemic to the Bivens action which have created an almost insurmountable bias against the plaintiff.” Rosen, supra, at 344. A heightened pleading standard would add another barricade, preventing meritorious claims from being heard and further insulating “high-ranking officials” from any liability for violating clearly established constitutional rights.

Petitioners rest their argument on a single example: former Attorney General Edward Levi (Pet. Br. at 40-41). In fact, General Levi’s experience demonstrates the minimal burden that Bivens has imposed on officials. A Westlaw search discloses only four reported decisions in Bivens actions naming Levi, all dismissed on the pleadings within a year of his departure from office. See Morpurgo v. Bd. of Higher Ed. in City of New York, 423 F. Supp. 704 (S.D.N.Y. 1976); Cole v. Kelley, 438 F. Supp. 129 (C.D. Cal. 1977); Ostrer v. Aronwald; 434 F. Supp. 379 (S.D.N.Y. 1977); Brawer v. Levi, 435 F. Supp. 534 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Bennett Boskey, who represented the Attorney General in some of these actions and is petitioners’ source for Levi’s experience, recounts that before he became involved the Justice Department “never notified [the Attorney General] of any of these suits . . . [because] they were confident that they could get the claims dismissed in due course without bothering the Attorney General.” Bennett Boskey, ed., Some Joys of Lawyering, at 113 (2007). In the end, all of the suits were resolved without Attorney General Levi having to testify, “even in a deposition.” Id. at 114.

Salesman, [redacted] TRUCK CENTER, [redacted], was advised of the official identity of the interviewing agent. [redacted] provided the following information:

[redacted] was working on Saturday, September 15, 2001 at approximately 10:30 a.m. when three males, who appeared to be Arabs, approached him and said they were interested in purchasing a truck. The men had initially inquired about a used truck, volunteering that the truck would be used to carry water. [redacted], in an attempt to find them a truck that would fit their need, asked them the size of the containers in which the water would be stored, how much the load would weigh and to whom they were going to deliver. Their answers were vague. [redacted] was suspicious when they could not answer his questions, but believes some of the confusion could have resulted from them trying to convert measurements from the metric system. [redacted] eventually learned that they would be hauling 450 containers weighing 30 pounds each. He determined they would need a large truck. [redacted] TRUCK CENTER is an IZUZU dealer and [redacted] showed them a new 14-foot IZUZU truck with a 14,000 pound capacity. The truck was listed for $30,000.

Exhibit B

It was decided that a 10-foot truck would be adequate and [redacted], who had none on the lot, told them he would check on how long it would take for him to get them one. One of the men gave him a business card which was printed in English on one side and what appears to be Arabic on the reverse side. The English side read, "Watermust Egypt Co., [redacted], G. Manager, [redacted], [redacted], Phone: [redacted], Fax: [redacted], Watermust Inc., [redacted], Phone: [redacted], Fax: [redacted]." Handwritten on the English side of the card is the name [redacted] and the telephone number [redacted]. A graphic of a desert oasis is pictured on both sides. [redacted] provided the original business card to the interviewing agent. A copy of the business card is attached to and made part of this FD-302.

[redacted] looked up the telephone number on a CD-rom yellow page directory. The number came back to ASHRAF A IBRAHIM at the same address as WATERMUST, however the business name was not listed.

[redacted] described the male who gave him the business card as approximately 45 years old, 5 feet 10 inches to 5 feet 11 inches tall, 180 to 200 pounds, with medium length wavy black hair. The second male was approximately 30 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, and thinner than the other two at approximately 160 pounds. He spoke English with no accent. He gave [redacted] his cell phone number [redacted] and said his name was [redacted]. He wore jeans and a T-shirt. The third male did not give his name. He was approximately 45 years old and weighed 180 to 200 pounds.

[redacted] did not get a good look at the maroon colored car in which they drove away.

Memo from Michael Chertoff to Dale Watson re:
Investigation of Individuals under Detention Pursuant to “Project Lookout,” with handwritten notes,
(produced by the United States)

U.S. Department of Justice

Criminal Division

Assistant Attorney General Washington, D.C. 20530

MEMORANDUM

[DRAFT]

TO: Dale L. Watson
Assistant Director
Counterterrorism Division
Federal Bureau of Investigation

FROM: Michael Chertoff
Assistant Attorney General

SUBJECT: Investigation of Individuals under
Detention Pursuant to “Project Lookout”

In the wake of the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, and to avert further attacks, the FBI created a “watchlist” of individuals wanted for questioning to determine whether or not they had information concerning these and any planned terrorist attacks. The FBI continuously updates this watchlist. As of this date, approximately 160 of these individuals are in custody, primarily on immigration related charges. It is incumbent upon us to determine expeditiously which

of these individuals were involved in or may have information related to these or other planned terrorist acts. Those individuals must remain in custody because they pose an imminent danger, and a determination must be made as to whether they should be charged. As to those we determine have no connection, they should be treated as any similarly situated alien would be treated under our immigration laws. We can neither detain these individuals indefinitely without cause nor release dangerous individuals into the general population.

It is essential that the decision as to whether or not to seek continued detention is made centrally by headquarters rather than by individual field offices. The decision as to whether a particular individual has pertinent information or poses a threat must be made in the broad context of the centrally coordinated investigation of the September 11 terrorist acts as well as the context of on-going and continual threat assessments. No individual field office has complete enough information to make this determination alone. For this reason, agreed upon procedures for the handling of all detainees are necessary.

On September 25, 2001, Associate Deputy Attorney General Stuart Levy convened a meeting of representatives of the FBI, INS, the Civil Division and the Criminal Division to establish procedures to ensure the prompt determination of the need for continued detention of these individuals. The process that was agreed upon at that time requires the FBI to interview each detainee and to provide results of that interview to FBI SIOC and to the INS attorney in the field. The FBI must also verify that the detainee is not the subject of or otherwise involved in any FBI intelligence investigation. It is essential that this determination be made both by the field office and by headquarters. The ultimate decision as to whether a particular detainee is or is not of interest to the FBI — based on an interview of the detainee and a review of pertinent intelligence investigations — is to be made by FBIHQ, not by individual field offices.

[redacted]

I am asking you to take the following steps to obtain the necessary information and facilitate this process:

- [10/2 EC covers] Each of the individuals in detention must be interviewed ~~promptly~~[on a priority basis], the relevant indices must be checked, and intelligence information and investigations reviewed, and the results of these inquiries should be supplied by the SAC or designated ASAC to FBIHQ with appropriate supporting documentation. This information should include the basis for the initial interest in the individual, the subsequent information developed, and the reason that there is no longer any interest in the individual. These interviews should be handled on a priority basis.
- [FBI call:] Each field office with detainees should designate at least one agent to promptly interview the detainees in that district. These interviews should be handled on a priority basis.

39a

Exhibit J

[redacted]

It is important that these aliens in detention are handled appropriately to make sure that those who are of investigative interest continue to be detained and those who are not of interest are handled by INS in the manner that similarly situated aliens would be handled. Your efforts in this regard are greatly appreciated.

Salesman, [redacted] TRUCK CENTER, [redacted], was advised of the official identity of the interviewing agent. [redacted] provided the following information:

[redacted] was working on Saturday, September 15, 2001 at approximately 10:30 a.m. when three males, who appeared to be Arabs, approached him and said they were interested in purchasing a truck. The men had initially inquired about a used truck, volunteering that the truck would be used to carry water. [redacted], in an attempt to find them a truck that would fit their need, asked them the size of the containers in which the water would be stored, how much the load would weigh and to whom they were going to deliver. Their answers were vague. [redacted] was suspicious when they could not answer his questions, but believes some of the confusion could have resulted from them trying to convert measurements from the metric system. [redacted] eventually learned that they would be hauling 450 containers weighing 30 pounds each. He determined they would need a large truck. [redacted] TRUCK CENTER is an IZUZU dealer and [redacted] showed them a new 14-foot IZUZU truck with a 14,000 pound capacity. The truck was listed for $30,000.

Exhibit B

It was decided that a 10-foot truck would be adequate and [redacted], who had none on the lot, told them he would check on how long it would take for him to get them one. One of the men gave him a business card which was printed in English on one side and what appears to be Arabic on the reverse side. The English side read, "Watermust Egypt Co., [redacted], G. Manager, [redacted], [redacted], Phone: [redacted], Fax: [redacted], Watermust Inc., [redacted], Phone: [redacted], Fax: [redacted]." Handwritten on the English side of the card is the name [redacted] and the telephone number [redacted]. A graphic of a desert oasis is pictured on both sides. [redacted] provided the original business card to the interviewing agent. A copy of the business card is attached to and made part of this FD-302.

[redacted] looked up the telephone number on a CD-rom yellow page directory. The number came back to ASHRAF A IBRAHIM at the same address as WATERMUST, however the business name was not listed.

[redacted] described the male who gave him the business card as approximately 45 years old, 5 feet 10 inches to 5 feet 11 inches tall, 180 to 200 pounds, with medium length wavy black hair. The second male was approximately 30 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, and thinner than the other two at approximately 160 pounds. He spoke English with no accent. He gave [redacted] his cell phone number [redacted] and said his name was [redacted]. He wore jeans and a T-shirt. The third male did not give his name. He was approximately 45 years old and weighed 180 to 200 pounds.

[redacted] did not get a good look at the maroon colored car in which they drove away.

Subject: September 11, 2001 — ASIF UR
REHMAN SAFFI

ASIF UR REHMAN SAFFI, date of birth: 16/06/1956, place of birth: Lahore, Pakistan, was detained on 30/09/2001 by Agents from the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service (USINS) after he attempted to enter Canada from the United States.

SAFFI is a Pakistani national holding dual citizenship with France by virtue of his marriage to a French national- [redacted] SAFFI was traveling under French passport #: 974010107806, as documented by his most recent entry into the United States on 06/07/2001.

SAFFI was refused entry into Canada by Canadian Immigration Authorities on 29/09/2001. He was allegedly traveling to Canada for the purpose of visiting a friend named [redacted]. Upon interviewing SAFFI, Canadian Authorities were not convinced that SAFFI had legitimate reasons to visit Canada. The Canadian investigators did not believe that SAFFI and [redacted] knew each other very well. SAFFI was also in possession of $1,400.00 in cash.

SAFFI was denied entry into Canada and placed on the next available flight to La Guardia Airport, New York City, whereupon he was arrested by USINS agents for violating his Visa status. SAFFI was admitted to the United States on 06/07/2001 as a Visitor under the U.S. Department of State's Visa Waiver Pilot Program. Nonetheless, SAFFI admitted to working while in the United States which violated the provisions of the Visa Waiver Pilot Program.

The New York Office of the FBI is currently investigating several of SAFFI's contacts. SAFFI's continued detention is dependent upon the results of that investigation.

Memo from Michael Chertoff to Dale Watson re:
Investigation of Individuals under Detention Pursuant
to “Project Lookout,” with handwritten notes,
(produced by the United States)

U.S. Department of Justice

Criminal Division

Assistant Attorney General Washington, D.C. 20530

MEMORANDUM

[DRAFT]

TO: Dale L. Watson
Assistant Director
Counterterrorism Division
Federal Bureau of Investigation

FROM: Michael Chertoff
Assistant Attorney General

SUBJECT: Investigation of Individuals under
Detention Pursuant to “Project Lookout”

In the wake of the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, and to avert further attacks, the FBI created a “watchlist” of individuals wanted for questioning to determine whether or not they had information concerning these and any planned terrorist attacks. The FBI continuously updates this watchlist. As of this date, approximately 160 of these individuals are in custody, primarily on immigration related charges. It is incumbent upon us to determine expeditiously which

of these individuals were involved in or may have information related to these or other planned terrorist acts. Those individuals must remain in custody because they pose an imminent danger, and a determination must be made as to whether they should be charged. As to those we determine have no connection, they should be treated as any similarly situated alien would be treated under our immigration laws. We can neither detain these individuals indefinitely without cause nor release dangerous individuals into the general population.

It is essential that the decision as to whether or not to seek continued detention is made centrally by headquarters rather than by individual field offices. The decision as to whether a particular individual has pertinent information or poses a threat must be made in the broad context of the centrally coordinated investigation of the September 11 terrorist acts as well as the context of on-going and continual threat assessments. No individual field office has complete enough information to make this determination alone. For this reason, agreed upon procedures for the handling of all detainees are necessary.

On September 25, 2001, Associate Deputy Attorney General Stuart Levy convened a meeting of representatives of the FBI, INS, the Civil Division and the Criminal Division to establish procedures to ensure the prompt determination of the need for continued detention of these individuals. The process that was agreed upon at that time requires the FBI to interview each detainee and to provide results of that interview to FBI SIOC and to the INS attorney in the field. The FBI must also verify that the detainee is not the subject of or otherwise involved in any FBI intelligence investigation. It is essential that this determination be made both by the field office and by headquarters. The ultimate decision as to whether a particular detainee is or is not of interest to the FBI — based on an interview of the detainee and a review of pertinent intelligence investigations — is to be made by FBIHQ, not by individual field offices.

[redacted]

I am asking you to take the following steps to obtain the necessary information and facilitate this process:

- [10/2 EC covers] Each of the individuals in detention must be interviewed ~~promptly~~[on a priority basis], the relevant indices must be checked, and intelligence information and investigations reviewed, and the results of these inquiries should be supplied by the SAC or designated ASAC to FBIHQ with appropriate supporting documentation. This information should include the basis for the initial interest in the individual, the subsequent information developed, and the reason that there is no longer any interest in the individual. These interviews should be handled on a priority basis.
- [FBI call:] Each field office with detainees should designate at least one agent to promptly interview the detainees in that district. These interviews should be handled on a priority basis.

39a

Exhibit J

[redacted]

It is important that these aliens in detention are handled appropriately to make sure that those who are of investigative interest continue to be detained and those who are not of interest are handled by INS in the manner that similarly situated aliens would be handled. Your efforts in this regard are greatly appreciated.
