The riots in Ferguson last year prompted a flurry of tweets from supporters of the terrorist group urging a greater uprising against the United States.

Anger erupted in Baltimore, Maryland, on the east coast of America, at the weekend following the death of 25-year-old Mr Gray on April 12.

He had been arrested by police after allegedly being caught with a knife.

He died in police custody from severe injuries to his spinal cord and larynx.

A protest over Mr Gray's death turned violent on Saturday and anger has continued into this week with at least 15 police officers injured, as well as incidents of arson and looting.

President Obama has admitted the situation in Baltimore is at crisis point "It would require everybody saying this is important, this is significant, and that we don't just pay attention to these communities when a CVS (pharmacy) burns and we don't just pay attention when a young man gets shot or has his spine snapped."
