

No. 26-60344

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

MAHMOUD KHALIL,

Petitioner,

v.

TODD WALLACE BLANCHE,
Acting U.S. Attorney General,

Respondent.

Petition for Review from an Order of the Board of Immigration Appeals
Agency No. A233 698 925

BRIEF OF AMICI CURIAE
FOUNDATION FOR INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS AND EXPRESSION,
CATO INSTITUTE, PEN AMERICA, NATIONAL COALITION AGAINST CENSORSHIP, FIRST AMENDMENT LAWYERS
ASSOCIATION, AND THE RUTHERFORD INSTITUTE, IN SUPPORT OF PETITIONER

Conor T. Fitzpatrick
FOUNDATION FOR INDIVIDUAL
RIGHTS AND EXPRESSION
700 Pennsylvania Ave. SE, Ste. 340
Washington, DC 20003
(215) 717-3473

Counsel for Amici Curiae

CERTIFICATE OF INTERESTED PERSONS AND CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

The undersigned counsel of record certifies that the following listed persons and entities as described in Local Rule 29.2 have an interest in the outcome of this case. These representations are made in order that the judges of this court may evaluate possible disqualification or recusal.

Person or Entity	Connection to Case
Foundation for Individual Rights and Expression (FIRE)	Amicus Curiae
Cato Institute	Amicus Curiae
PEN American Center, Inc. (PEN America)	Amicus Curiae
National Coalition Against Censorship (NCAC)	Amicus Curiae
First Amendment Lawyers Association (FALA)	Amicus Curiae
The Rutherford Institute	Amicus Curiae
Conor T. Fitzpatrick	Counsel for Amici Curiae

Pursuant to Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 26.1, counsel for amici certifies that (1) amici do not have any parent corporations, and (2) no publicly held companies hold 10% or more of the stock or ownership interest in amici.

Dated: August 21, 2026

/s/ Conor T. Fitzpatrick

Conor T. Fitzpatrick
FOUNDATION FOR INDIVIDUAL
RIGHTS AND EXPRESSION

TABLE OF CONTENTS

CERTIFICATE OF INTERESTED PERSONS AND CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT	i
TABLE OF AUTHORITIES	iv
INTEREST OF AMICI CURIAE	1
INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT	5
ARGUMENT	7
I. The First Amendment Protects Noncitizens.....	8
A. The Alien Friends Act of 1798 Faced Immediate Backlash and Led to the Extinction of the Federalist Party.	9
B. Noncitizens Played a Key Role at the Founding.	18
II. The First Amendment Bars Deportation Based on Protected Speech.	23
A. Unbroken Caselaw Holds the First Amendment Prohibits Deporting Noncitizens Based on Speech.	23
B. Deporting a Noncitizen for Speech is Forbidden Viewpoint Discrimination.....	29
C. Deporting Noncitizens Based on Speech Amounts to Unconstitutional Retaliation.....	31
III. Allowing the Government to Deport Speakers Deemed Contrary to the National Interest is an Un-American Approach to Speech.	32
CONCLUSION	34

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases

303 Creative LLC v. Elenis , 600 U.S. 570 (2023)	5
Am. Assoc. of Univ. Professors v. Rubio , 802 F. Supp. 3d 120 (D. Mass. 2025)	30
Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm. v. Reno , 70 F.3d 1045 (9th Cir. 1995)	passim
Arizona v. United States , 567 U.S. 387 (2012)	17
Ashcroft v. ACLU , 535 U.S. 564 (2002)	8
Bailey v. Iles , 87 F.4th 275 (5th Cir. 2023).....	31
Bridges v. California , 314 U.S. 252 (1941)	23
Bridges v. Wixon , 326 U.S. 135 (1945)	6, 23, 25, 34
Citizens United v. FEC , 558 U.S. 310 (2010)	30
Dennis v. United States , 341 U.S. 494 (1951)	27
Dep’t of State v. Muñoz , 602 U.S. 899 (2024)	26
Edwards v. South Carolina , 372 U.S. 229 (1963)	32
Ex parte Milligan , 71 U.S. 2 (1866)	6

FCC v. Pacifica Found. , 438 U.S. 726 (1978)	29
Fong Yue Ting v. United States , 149 U.S. 698 (1893)	16
Galvan v. Press , 347 U.S. 522 (1954)	25
Harisiades v. Shaughnessy , 342 U.S. 580 (1952)	27, 28
Holder v. Humanitarian L. Project , 561 U.S. 1 (2010)	26
Keenan v. Tejada , 290 F.3d 252 (5th Cir. 2002)	31
Kleindienst v. Mandel , 408 U.S. 753 (1972)	26
Kwong Hai Chew v. Colding , 344 U.S. 590 (1953)	5, 23, 27
Lozman v. Riviera Beach , 585 U.S. 87 (2018)	31
McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Comm’n , 514 U.S. 334 (1995)	21
Moody v. NetChoice, LLC , 603 U.S. 707 (2024)	30
Nat’l Rifle Ass’n of Am. v. Vullo , 602 U.S. 175 (2024)	6
Pahls v. Thomas , 718 F.3d 1210 (10th Cir. 2013)	24
Rafeedie v. INS , 795 F. Supp. 13 (D.D.C. 1992)	23

Reed v. Town of Gilbert , 576 U.S. 155 (2015)	30
Reno v. AADC , 525 U.S. 471 (1999)	28
Rosenberger v. Rector & Visitors of Univ. of Va. , 515 U.S. 819 (1995)	29
Sessions v. Dimaya , 584 U.S. 148 (2018)	7, 17, 26
Snyder v. Phelps , 562 U.S. 443 (2011)	30
Sorrell v. IMS Health Inc. , 564 U.S. 552 (2011)	30
Speiser v. Randall , 357 U.S. 513 (1958)	25
Trump v. J.G.G. , 604 U.S. 670 (2025)	17
Turner Broadcasting Sys., Inc. v. FCC , 512 U.S. 622 (1994)	30
Turner v. Williams , 194 U.S. 279 (1904)	28
United States v. Robel , 389 U.S. 258 (1967)	26
W. Va. State Bd. of Educ. v. Barnette , 319 U.S. 624 (1943)	29
Zadvydas v. Davis , 533 U.S. 678 (2001)	27

Statutes

An Act Concerning Aliens, Pub. L. No. 5-58, § 1, 1 Stat. 570 (1798) (expired June 25, 1800).....	passim
Sedition Act, Pub. L. No. 5–74, 1 Stat. 596 (1798) (expired Mar. 3, 1801)	passim

Treatises

1 Smolla & Nimmer on Freedom of Speech § 10:19.....	27
---	----

Constitutional Provisions

U.S. Const. amend. I	passim
U.S. Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. 1.....	25

Congressional Records

4 Annals of Cong. 934 (1794)	9
8 Annals of Cong. 1954–2029 (1798)	11
8 Annals of Cong. 2985–3017 (1799)	13
25 Annals of Cong. 664 (1813)	16
32 Annals of Cong. 1326 (1818)	17
9 Reg. Deb. 1017 (1833).....	16

Foreign Constitutional Provisions

Federal Law of the Russian Federation on Information, Informational Technologies and the Protection of Information [Russian Federation Collection of Legislation] 2006, No. 31, Item 3448.....	32, 33
Law of Printing and Publication (Royal Decree No. M/23, 3/9/1424 H), art. 9 (2003)	33
Xianfa art. 51 (1982).....	32

Other Authorities

1 Hermann von Holst, The Constitutional and Political History of the United States (John J. Lalor & Alfred B. Mason trans., 1876).....	16
3 Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States 164 (1833)	16
4 The Debates in the Several State Conventions on the Adoption of the Federal Constitution (Jonathan Elliot ed., 1836)	passim
14 The Papers of Thomas Jefferson (Julian P. Boyd et al. eds., 2018).....	9
17 The Papers of James Madison (William T. Hutchinson et al. eds., 1991)	7, 11
30 The Papers of Thomas Jefferson (Barbara B. Oberg ed., 2018)	10
33 The Papers of Thomas Jefferson (Barbara B. Oberg ed., 2018)	15
Charles Slack, Liberty's First Crisis: Adams, Jefferson, and the Misfits Who Saved Free Speech (2015).....	18
Daniel Green, Great Cobbett: The Noblest Agitator (1985)	21
David A. Wilson, United Irishmen, United States: Immigrant Radicals in the Early Republic (1998).....	20
David M. Rabban, The First Amendment in Its Forgotten Years , 90 Yale L.J. 514 (1981).....	28
Douglas Bradburn, A Clamor in the Public Mind: Opposition to the Alien and Sedition Acts , 65 Wm. & Mary Q. 565 (2008)	12

George Parker Winship, Two or Three Boston Papers , 14 Papers Bibliographical Soc’y Am. (1920).....	22
History, Art, & Archives: United States House of Representatives, Party Divisions of the House of Representatives, 1789 to Present	15
James Morton Smith, Freedom’s Fetters: The Alien and Sedition Laws and American Civil Liberties (1956)	10, 11, 20
Jenny Graham, The Emigration of Joseph Priestley to America 1794–1804 (1995).....	21
Letter from James Madison to Thomas Jefferson (May 20, 1798)	11
Letter from Thomas Jefferson to David Humphreys (Mar. 18, 1789)	9
Letter from Thomas Jefferson to Joseph Priestley (Mar. 21, 1801)	15
Letter from Thomas Jefferson to Thomas Mann Randolph (May 9, 1798).....	10
Matthew J. Lindsay, Immigration, Sovereignty, and the Constitution of Foreigners , 45 Conn. L. Rev. 743 (2013)	14
Philadelphia Naturalization Records (P. William Filby ed., 1982)	19
Stephen D. Solomon, Revolutionary Dissent: How the Founding Generation Created the Freedom of Speech (2016).....	18
Terri Diane Halperin, The Alien and Sedition Acts of 1798: Testing the Constitution (2016).....	12
The New York Criminal Anarchy Act , 36 Harv. L. Rev. 199 (1922)	28
Thomas Jefferson, First Inaugural Address (Mar. 4, 1801)	34

United States Senate,
 Party Division 15

Wendell Bird,
 Criminal Dissent: Prosecutions Under the Alien and Sedition
 Acts of 1798 (2020)..... passim

William Duane,
 A Letter to George Washington, President of the United States
 (Nov. 12, 1796)..... 19

INTEREST OF *AMICI CURIAE*¹

The Foundation for Individual Rights and Expression (FIRE) is a nonpartisan nonprofit that defends the rights of all Americans to free speech and free thought—the essential qualities of liberty. Since 1999, FIRE has successfully defended First Amendment rights nationwide without regard to speakers’ views through public advocacy, strategic litigation, and amicus curiae filings in cases implicating expressive rights. See, e.g., Volokh v. James, 148 F.4th 71 (2d Cir. 2025); Pernell v. Fl. Bd. of Gov. of St. Univ., 181 F.4th 1135 (11th Cir. 2026); Reges v. Cauce, 175 F.4th 1014 (9th Cir. 2026). FIRE is deeply concerned by the government’s claim of authority to subject resident aliens to adverse action for their expressed viewpoints. FIRE has engaged in direct litigation on this issue on behalf of noncitizens and a student newspaper with noncitizen writers and editors. See Stanford Daily Publ’g Corp. v. Rubio, 820 F. Supp. 3d 974 (N.D. Cal. 2026). FIRE has also provided amicus support to noncitizens facing deportation based on protected speech. See Br. Amici Curiae FIRE et al. Supp. Pet'r-Appellee, Khalil v. Trump, 164 F.4th 259 (3d Cir. 2025) (No. 25-2162); Br. Amici Curiae FIRE et al. Supp. Pet'r-Appellee, Mahdawi v. Trump, No. 25-1113, 2026 WL 2090981 (2d Cir. July 21, 2026); Br. Amici Curiae FIRE et al. Supp. Pet'r-Appellee, Ozturk v. Hyde, No. 25-1019 (2d Cir. dismissed July 21, 2026). FIRE seeks to ensure the First Amendment continues to constrain the government from subjecting individuals to disfavored treatment based on their viewpoint.

¹ No counsel for a party authored this brief in whole or part. Further, no person, other than amici, their members, or their counsel contributed money intended to fund preparing or submitting this brief. All parties have consented to the filing of this brief.

The Cato Institute is a nonpartisan public-policy research foundation established in 1977 and dedicated to advancing the principles of individual liberty, free markets, and limited government. Cato's Robert A. Levy Center for Constitutional Studies was established in 1989 to help restore the principles of limited constitutional government that are the foundation of liberty. Toward those ends, Cato publishes books and studies, conducts conferences, produces the annual Cato Supreme Court Review, and files amicus briefs.

PEN American Center, Inc. ("PEN America") is a nonpartisan nonprofit organization working at the intersection of literature and human rights. Founded in 1922, PEN America advocates for free expression and the interests of writers and journalists in the United States and abroad. Its membership includes more than 5,000 writers, journalists, literary professionals, and readers nationwide. PEN America protects press freedom and journalists by combatting disinformation, defending journalists against online abuse, and supporting local news.

The National Coalition Against Censorship (NCAC) is an alliance of more than 60 national non-profit literary, artistic, religious, educational, and civil liberties groups. NCAC was founded in 1974 in response to the United States Supreme Court's landmark decision in Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15 (1973), which narrowed First Amendment protections for sexual expression and opened the door to obscenity prosecutions. The organization's purpose is to promote free speech in service of democracy. NCAC engages in direct advocacy and education to support free expression rights of students, teachers, librarians, artists, and others. It therefore has a longstanding interest in ensuring robust First Amendment protections for all, including noncitizens. The positions advocated in this brief do not necessarily reflect the views of NCAC's member organizations.

The First Amendment Lawyers Association (FALA) is a nonprofit organization comprised of attorneys across the United States with a shared commitment to preserving and advancing the rights guaranteed by the First Amendment. Since its founding in the 1960s, FALA has actively participated in cases concerning free expression, freedom of the press, and restrictions on speech in public spaces. FALA members are often on the front lines of First Amendment litigation, and the organization frequently appears as amicus to protect against government encroachment on constitutional expression.

The Rutherford Institute is a nonprofit civil liberties organization which was founded in 1982 by its President, John W. Whitehead. The Institute provides legal assistance at no charge to individuals whose constitutional rights have been violated and educates the public about issues affecting their freedoms.

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.”

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

The First Amendment bars deporting noncitizens for protected speech. It is unthinkable that a person in a free society could be jailed and deported for expressing an opinion. Certainly not in the country envisioned by our nation’s Framers, who viewed “the freedom to think and speak” as “inalienable human rights.” 303 Creative LLC v. Elenis, 600 U.S. 570, 584 (2023).

To protect those inalienable rights, the Framers crafted the First Amendment, ensuring that “Congress shall make no law” abridging the right of individuals to think and speak for themselves. The Bill of Rights’ opening command, forged when noncitizen Europeans were some of the most prolific and controversial commentators of the day, makes no “distinction between citizens and resident aliens.” Kwong Hai Chew v. Colding, 344 U.S. 590, 596 n.5 (1953) (internal quotation marks omitted).

James Madison explained that because noncitizens “owe, on one hand, a temporary obedience” to American laws, “they are entitled in return, to their protection and advantage.” James Madison, Report on the Virginia Resolutions (1800), reprinted in 4 The Debates in the Several State Conventions on the Adoption of the Federal Constitution 546, 556 (Jonathan Elliot ed., 1836) (“Elliot’s Debates”). Thus, the Supreme Court has made clear that the First Amendment’s protection for “[f]reedom of speech and of press is accorded aliens residing in this country.” Bridges v. Wixon, 326 U.S. 135, 148 (1945).

Yet the government contends the First Amendment provides no shield against deportation based on protected speech. The government is incorrect. The First Amendment prohibits government officials from “us[ing] the power of the State to punish or suppress disfavored expression.” Nat’l Rifle Ass’n of Am. v. Vullo, 602 U.S. 175, 188 (2024). Deporting noncitizens based on speech is inescapably just that.

The Constitution “is a law for rulers and people, equally in war and in peace, and covers with the shield of its protection all classes of men, at all times, and under all circumstances.” Ex parte Milligan, 71 U.S. 2, 120–21 (1866). The government’s argument that the political branches may expel law-abiding noncitizens for expressing a disfavored opinion is contrary to centuries of American history and settled law. This Court should vacate the BIA’s decision and terminate removal proceedings.

ARGUMENT

Our Nation has been here before. In 1798, fearful that Irish and French immigrants were importing the spirit of the French Revolution, the Federalist majority in Congress passed, and President John Adams signed, the Alien Friends Act. It authorized Adams to deport any noncitizen he deemed “dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States.” An Act Concerning Aliens, Pub. L. No. 5-58, § 1, 1 Stat. 570, 571 (1798) (expired June 25, 1800). But as Justice Gorsuch explained, the Alien Friends Act was “one of the most notorious laws in our country’s history,” “widely condemned as unconstitutional,” and “may have cost the Federalist Party its existence.” Sessions v. Dimaya, 584 U.S. 148, 185 (2018) (Gorsuch, J., concurring).

During the drafting process, James Madison called the law a “monster that must for ever disgrace its parents.” Letter from James Madison to Thomas Jefferson (May 20, 1798), in 17 The Papers of James Madison 133–34 (William T. Hutchinson et al. eds., 1991). He compared presidential power to banish noncitizens for speech to that of a king: “Could a power be well given in terms less definite, less particular, and less precise? ... They leave everything to the President. His will is the law.” Madison, Report on the Virginia Resolutions, reprinted in Elliot’s Debates, supra, at 560. The Alien Friends Act expired on its own terms in 1800 (not long before its sister statute, the Sedition Act), and the backlash to the Acts helped usher Thomas Jefferson into the presidency.

But 225 years later, the spirit of the Alien Friends Act rises from the grave. Yet again we have an executive branch fueled by a belief that the Constitution permits banishing peaceful noncitizens from our shores for voicing “dangerous” ideas. Yet again the executive branch is wrong.

I. The First Amendment Protects Noncitizens.

The First Amendment’s guarantee that “Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech’ ... embodies our profound national commitment to the free exchange of ideas.” Ashcroft v. ACLU, 535 U.S. 564, 573 (2002) (cleaned up). This commitment traces to the founding belief in free speech as an inalienable right rather than a government-bestowed privilege. Two years before the First Amendment’s ratification, Thomas Jefferson explained: “There are rights which it is useless to surrender to the government, and which yet, governments have always been fond to invade. These are the rights of thinking, and publishing our thoughts by speaking or writing.” Letter from Thomas Jefferson to David Humphreys (Mar. 18, 1789), in 14 The Papers of Thomas Jefferson 676, 678 (Julian P. Boyd et al. eds., 2018). Three years after ratification, James Madison put the First Amendment’s command in plain terms: “Opinions are not the objects of legislation.” 4 Annals of Cong. 934 (1794).

The government’s position that the First Amendment poses no barrier to deporting noncitizens based on their protected speech ignores freedom of speech’s status as an inalienable right not subject to government regulation. Moreover, it ignores the extensive contemporaneous backlash to the Alien Friends Act and the prominent role noncitizen dissidents and commentators have played since the Founding.

A. The Alien Friends Act of 1798 Faced Immediate Backlash and Led to the Extinction of the Federalist Party.

The Alien Friends Act stands in infamy alongside its sister statute, the Sedition Act.² After publication of the XYZ dispatches in early 1798 inflamed anti-French sentiment across the United States, the Adams administration and its Federalist allies in Congress seized the moment as an opportunity to curtail political opposition to their policies. The Federalists' "first move was to identify [Jefferson's] Republican party with the French, and then to treat opposition to administration measures as nearly traitorous." James Morton Smith, Freedom's Fetters: The Alien and Sedition Laws and American Civil Liberties 14 (1956).

² The Sedition Act made it a crime for any person to “print, utter, or publish ... any false, scandalous, and malicious writing” about the government. Pub. L. No. 5–74, 1 Stat. 596 (1798) (expired Mar. 3, 1801).

The Federalist-controlled Senate quickly began work on the Alien Friends Act, which authorized the president to deport any noncitizen he deemed "dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States." An Act Concerning Aliens, Pub. L. No. 5–58, § 1, 1 Stat. 570, 571 (1798) (expired June 25, 1800). Thomas Jefferson decried the legislation as "an alien bill worthy of the 8th or 9th century." Letter from Thomas Jefferson to Thomas Mann Randolph (May 9, 1798), in 30 The Papers of Thomas Jefferson 341 (Barbara B. Oberg ed., 2018). Madison was equally harsh: "The Alien Bill proposed in the Senate is a monster that must for ever disgrace its parents. I should not have supposed it possible that such [a] one could have been engendered in either House, & still persuade myself, that it cannot possibly be fathered by both." Letter from James Madison to Thomas Jefferson (May 20, 1798), in 17 The Papers of James Madison, supra, at 133–34.

Republicans in the House mounted a vigorous attack on the bill’s constitutionality, led by future Secretary of State Edward Livingston and future Secretary of the Treasury Albert Gallatin. See 8 Annals of Cong. 1954–2029 (1798); Smith, supra, at 63–90. Livingston railed against the bill, arguing that a broad view of aliens’ rights would be “consonant to the principles of common justice, for who alone would ever resort to another country, if he alone was marked out as the object of arbitrary power?” 8 Annals of Cong. 2012 (1798) (statement of Rep. Livingston). But the Alien Friends Act narrowly passed, carried exclusively by the Federalist majority. Wendell Bird, Criminal Dissent: Prosecutions Under the Alien and Sedition Acts of 1798 40 (2020).

The Alien Friends Act and accompanying Sedition Act sparked an immediate backlash. Petitions urging the laws’ repeal flooded Congress, including at least two from Irish aliens in Philadelphia and New York City, which the Federalist majority agreed to consider (thus implicitly acknowledging noncitizens’ First Amendment right to petition). See Terri Diane Halperin, The Alien and Sedition Acts of 1798: Testing the Constitution 108 (2016); Douglas Bradburn, A Clamor in the Public Mind: Opposition to the Alien and Sedition Acts, 65 Wm. & Mary Q. 565, 579 (2008) (explaining that the Irish petitions were “bold ... assertion[s] by noncitizens of an authority to interpret the Constitution, decrying what they believed was the unconstitutional nature of the Alien Act and asking for its repeal”). As time passed, a growing number of Federalists—including Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, President Washington’s minister to France—voiced opposition to the Alien and Sedition Acts. See Bird, supra, at 48–49; see also Bradburn, supra, at 572, 593.

Public opposition to the Acts prompted the passage of the famous Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions in those states’ respective legislatures calling for the Acts’ repeal. See Bradburn, supra, at 566–67. Jefferson drafted the Kentucky Resolutions while Madison drafted the Virginia Resolutions, the latter declaring the Alien Friends Act a “palpable and alarming infraction[] of the Constitution” that “subverts the general principles of free government, as well as the particular organization and positive provisions of the Federal Constitution.” Virginia Resolutions of 1798, reprinted in Elliot’s Debates, supra, at 528. Tennessee and Georgia passed resolutions supporting Kentucky’s and Virginia's call to repeal the Acts, with Tennessee decrying the Acts as "in several parts opposed to the constitution, and ... impolitic, oppressive, and unnecessary." Bird, supra, at 169–73.

Responding to the state resolutions, the federal House of Representatives narrowly adopted a committee report defending the Acts' constitutionality. See 8 Annals of Cong. 2985–3017 (1799). The Federalist majority relied on the same argument advanced the year before, that aliens were not members of the polity and therefore not entitled to constitutional rights. See 8 Annals of Cong. 2987 (1799) ("[T]he Constitution was made for citizens, not for aliens, who of consequence have no rights under it, but remain in the country and enjoy the benefit of the laws, not as matter of right, but merely as matter of favor and permission.").

Madison penned a lengthy rebuttal which the Virginia legislature adopted in what came to be known as the "Report of 1800." The Report rejected the Federalists' position that aliens possessed no constitutional rights and argued noncitizens have a reciprocal relationship with America's Constitution and laws:

Again, it is said that, aliens not being parties to the constitution, the rights and privileges which it secures, cannot be at all claimed by them. ... [But] it does not follow, because aliens are not parties to the Constitution, as citizens are parties to it, that, whilst they actually conform to it, they have no right to its protection. Aliens are not more parties to the laws than they are parties to the Constitution; yet, it will not be disputed that, as they owe, on one hand, a temporary obedience, they are entitled in return to their protection and advantage.

Madison, Report on the Virginia Resolutions, reprinted in Elliot's Debates, supra, at 556.

“The constitutional arguments advanced by Republicans in opposition” to the Alien and Sedition Acts “better reflected mainstream political and legal opinion” about the federal government’s authority over noncitizens. Matthew J. Lindsay, Immigration, Sovereignty, and the Constitution of Foreigners, 45 Conn. L. Rev. 743, 759 (2013). To that end, Jefferson, Madison, and the Republicans made opposition to the Acts “a central part” of their strategy for the 1800 elections. Bird, supra, at 165. “The Republican belief that the Constitution and its liberties were being violated by the Federalists, and particularly by the Alien and Sedition Acts, provided an effective platform and a powerful motivation.” Id. at 369.

The Republicans swept to victory, flipping both houses of Congress and winning a near-supermajority in the House.³ The results showed “extensive public support for a broad understanding of freedoms of press and speech, and for the Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions.” Bird, supra, at 368. Jefferson remarked to Joseph Priestley, who was both an English citizen living in the United States and a prominent Republican-aligned political philosopher, that “a mighty wave of public opinion” had vindicated the Republican vision of the Constitution, bringing noncitizens squarely “under the protection of those laws which were made for the wise & the good like you, and disclaim the legitimacy of that libel on legislation which under the form of a law was for sometime placed among them.” Letter from Thomas Jefferson to Joseph Priestley (Mar. 21, 1801), in 33 The Papers of Thomas Jefferson 393, 394 (Barbara B. Oberg ed., 2018).

³ History, Art, & Archives: United States House of Representatives, Party Divisions of the House of Representatives, 1789 to Present, <https://history.house.gov/Institution/Party-Divisions/Party-Divisions/> [<https://perma.cc/E275-S644>]; United States Senate, Party Division, <https://www.senate.gov/history/partydiv.htm> [<https://perma.cc/U5HR-MPEB>].

The Alien Friends Act sits in the ash heap of constitutional history. It “was severely denounced by many of [America’s] ablest statesmen and jurists as unconstitutional and barbarous” and “has ever since been the subject of universal condemnation.” Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698, 747, 750 (1893) (Field, J., dissenting). Speaker Henry Clay called it an “insidious attack upon the freedom of the person.” 25 Annals of Cong. 664 (1813). And Justice Joseph Story observed that the Alien and Sedition Acts had “left no permanent traces in the constitutional jurisprudence of the country.” 3 Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States 164 (1833); see also 1 Hermann von Holst, The Constitutional and Political History of the United States 142 (John J. Lalor & Alfred B. Mason trans., 1876) (“[F]or a long time, [the Alien and Sedition Acts] have been considered in the United States as unquestionably unconstitutional.”).

Thirty years later, Representative Erastus Root of New York remarked, “[T]he alien law[] had been, by the political revolution of 1801, pronounced, as facts could speak, in terms as strong as human language could furnish, as strong as any language that could be used in judicial decisions, to be unconstitutional and void.” 9 Reg. Deb. 1017 (1833).

Virginia Representative Henry St. George Tucker Sr. concurred: “It would be absurd to speak of the alien and sedition laws as precedents. It would be absurd to attribute the sanctity of national acquiescence, to measures which were received with the deep-toned murmurs of national disapprobation.” 32 Annals of Cong. 1326 (1818).

The rejection of the Alien and Sedition Acts continues. Justice Gorsuch recently highlighted the Alien Friends Act’s status as “one of the most notorious laws in our country’s history.” Sessions, 584 U.S. at 185–86 (Gorsuch, J., concurring). Justice Scalia called it a “fleeting exception” in the early history of American immigration law and quoted Jefferson’s assertion that “no power over [alien friends] has been delegated to the United States ... distinct from their power over citizens.” Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 420–21 (2012) (Scalia, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (cleaned up). Just last year, Justice Sotomayor noted the Alien Friends Act was “widely denounced” and “lapsed in disrepute.” Trump v. J.G.G., 604 U.S. 670, 676 (2025) (Sotomayor, J., dissenting).

So, here, when the government attempts to rely on immigration statutes to expel law-abiding noncitizens for speech the government disfavors, it is resuscitating a long-rejected view of noncitizen rights under our Constitution. This Court should not reverse course.

B. Noncitizens Played a Key Role at the Founding.

Noncitizen activists and commentators have played a starring role in American politics. During the early Republic, many of the most prominent (and controversial) voices were noncitizens, yet none faced deportation based on their speech. Take Scotland's James Callender, who one historian described as "the most scurrilous of the Republican writers of the 1790s." Bird, supra, at 303. With Thomas Jefferson's financial support, Callender "discharged his pen against the Federalists," exposed Alexander Hamilton's extramarital affair, and, after a falling out with Jefferson, was the first to publish the scandalous "allegations that Jefferson had fathered children with one of [Jefferson's] slaves." Stephen D. Solomon, Revolutionary Dissent: How the Founding Generation Created the Freedom of Speech 271, 284, 293 (2016); Charles Slack, Liberty's First Crisis: Adams, Jefferson, and the Misfits Who Saved Free Speech 62 (2015).⁴

⁴ Philadelphia records reflect that Callender petitioned for naturalization in 1798 but do not indicate that he took the oath of

Consider also William Duane from Newfoundland Colony,⁵ who served as editor of the Philadelphia Aurora, the foremost opposition newspaper to the Adams administration. See Bird, supra, at 227–31. There, Duane “waged relentless attacks against the Federalists.” Id. at 229. Shortly after arriving in the United States, Duane wrote a scathing critique of George Washington in a pamphlet published by the Aurora, disparaging him as a hypocrite for owning slaves and suggesting his “attachment to the revolution was not the result of a love of republican freedom, but of disappointed ambition.” William Duane, A Letter to George Washington, President of the United States 34, 47–48 (Nov. 12, 1796) [<https://perma.cc/Y7LK-G7CT>].⁶

Irishman James Reynolds’ experience is likewise instructive. Reynolds was a close ally of Duane and regularly contributed to the Aurora. David A. Wilson, United Irishmen, United States: Immigrant allegiance and became a citizen prior to his death in 1803. Philadelphia Naturalization Records ix, 77 (P. William Filby ed., 1982).

⁵ Bird, supra, at 241 (noting an 1801 court finding that Duane was not an American citizen).

⁶ Duane published this piece under the name “Jasper Dwight,” which a Federalist newspaper later exposed as Duane’s pseudonym. Bird, supra, at 229.

Radicals in the Early Republic 41–42 (1998); Bird, supra, at 63. In 1799, Reynolds, Duane, and others circulated a petition in Philadelphia urging repeal of the Alien Friends Act, arguing it unconstitutionally denied aliens due process, subverted the presumption of innocence, and vested arbitrary power in the president. See Wilson, supra, at 52. A group of Federalists objected to their signature-gathering efforts at a church and a physical altercation ensued. Id. at 53. A Federalist prosecutor indicted Reynolds for assault with intent to kill and, at trial, argued aliens have “no right whatever to petition, or to interfere in any respect with the government of this country—as the right of voting is confined to our citizens, the right of petitioning is also.” Id. at 53; Smith, supra, at 281.

Reynolds’ counsel, Alexander Dallas (a future Secretary of the Treasury under President James Madison), invoked the First Amendment as a defense to the charges. See Smith, supra, at 281–82; Wilson, supra, at 53–54. The jury acquitted on all counts. See Smith, supra, at 282 (“The jury had repudiated the arguments that aliens were not entitled to a lawful exercise of the right of petition as guaranteed in the Constitution.”). This is persuasive evidence of the contemporaneous understanding of the First Amendment. See also McIntyre v. Ohio

Elections Comm’n, 514 U.S. 334, 361 (1995) (Thomas, J., concurring) (explaining how publisher John Peter Zenger’s 1735 acquittal by a New York jury for the “crime” of insulting the British royal governor sheds light on the early American understanding of press freedom); see also id. at 374 (Scalia, J., dissenting) (arguing that the Zenger trial is “unquestionably” relevant to the constitutional question of “whether criticism of the government could be punished by the state” (emphasis deleted)).

The records at the Founding are filled with examples of other prominent noncitizen firebrand commentators. Englishman (and, later, French citizen) Joseph Priestley was a vocal proponent of republicanism whose writings were widely circulated in Jeffersonian circles. See Jenny Graham, Revolutionary in Exile: The Emigration of Joseph Priestley to America 1794–1804, 85 Transactions of the Am. Phil. Soc’y, 1–3, 96, 141–42 (1995) [<https://perma.cc/Y66M-E9T3>]. William Cobbett from England published the popular daily newspaper Porcupine’s Gazette in which he “cheerfully abused almost every hero in the American pantheon and derisively trampled on what was to become known as the American dream.” Daniel Green, Great Cobbett: The Noblest Agitator 130 (1985).

And Frenchman Joseph de Nançrède published the influential Courier de Boston newspaper for French immigrants, urging Americans to sever ties with England and adopt the French language. George Parker Winship, Two or Three Boston Papers, 14 Papers of the Bibliographical Soc’y of Am. 57–59, 69–76 (1920) [<https://perma.cc/N2X2-HD7N>]. All were influential. Some were incendiary. None were deported.

Over the last two centuries, noncitizens have continued to play a prominent role in American political discourse. Christiane Amanpour, Piers Morgan, John Oliver,⁷ and countless others have provided their unique perspectives on life in America to millions of viewers and listeners. Under the Constitution, it is for the American public, not the government, to decide whether their views are worthy of being heard. The only permissible remedy is the remote control, not a deportation flight.

⁷ John Oliver became a U.S. citizen in late 2019.

II. The First Amendment Bars Deportation Based on Protected Speech.

A. Unbroken Caselaw Holds the First Amendment Prohibits Deporting Noncitizens Based on Speech.

True to the Framers' rejection of the Alien Friends Act, the Supreme Court has made clear the Constitution's "freedom of speech and of press is accorded aliens residing in this country." Wixon, 326 U.S. at 148 (citing Bridges v. California, 314 U.S. 252 (1941)). Our First Amendment does not "acknowledge[] any distinction between citizens and resident aliens." Kwong Hai Chew, 344 U.S. at 596 n.5 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Wixon, 326 U.S. at 161 (Murphy, J., concurring) ("Once an alien lawfully enters and resides in this country he becomes invested with the rights guaranteed by the Constitution to all people within our borders ... includ[ing] those protected by the First and the Fifth Amendments").

This has stood as established law for more than 70 years. See, e.g., Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm. v. Reno, 70 F.3d 1045, 1065 (9th Cir. 1995) ("AADC"); Rafeedie v. INS, 795 F. Supp. 13, 22 (D.D.C. 1992) ("It has long been settled that aliens within the United States enjoy the protection of the First Amendment...."). That is because the First Amendment operates as a restraint on government infringing the inalienable right of free speech. At bottom, “freedom of speech is a negative liberty. The First Amendment is a restriction on the government’s power to ‘abridge’ speech.” Pahls v. Thomas, 718 F.3d 1210, 1239 (10th Cir. 2013) (cleaned up).

The Ninth Circuit, with a nod to Madison’s Report of 1800, held the First Amendment prohibits deporting aliens for protected speech. AADC, 70 F.3d at 1065. The court explained, “The Framers explicitly recognized that aliens within this country participate in a reciprocal relationship of societal obligations and correlative protection.” Id. (citing Madison, Report on the Virginia Resolutions, reprinted in 4 Elliot’s Debates, supra, at 556). Therefore, “the values underlying the First Amendment require the full applicability of First Amendment rights to the deportation setting.” Id. at 1064. After all, “[i]f aliens do not have First Amendment rights at deportation, then their First Amendment rights in other contexts are a nullity, because the omnipresent threat of deportation would permanently chill their expressive and associational activities.” Id. at 1065–66.

The First Amendment constrains Congress' exercise of its immigration authority just as it does Congress' other enumerated powers. For example, while Congress may "lay and collect Taxes," U.S. Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. 1, it would violate the First Amendment to condition a tax rebate on having a Republican yard sign. See, e.g., Speiser v. Randall, 357 U.S. 513, 518 (1958) ("Congress may not, by withdrawal of mailing privileges, place limitations upon the freedom of speech which, if directly attempted, would be unconstitutional."). Likewise here: While Congress has authority to craft legislation regulating noncitizens in the country, see Galvan v. Press, 347 U.S. 522, 530 (1954), it cannot legislate in a manner that targets their protected speech. As the Ninth Circuit held, quoting Justice Murphy's concurrence in Wixon, "Since resident aliens have constitutional rights, it follows that Congress may not ignore them in the exercise of its 'plenary' power of deportation." AADC, 70 F.3d at 1065 (quoting Wixon, 326 U.S. at 161 (Murphy, J., concurring)).

These principles remain true even when the political branches invoke their foreign-affairs powers. As the Supreme Court explained, "Faced with a clear conflict between a federal statute enacted in the interests of national security and an individual's exercise of his First Amendment rights, we have confined our analysis to whether Congress has adopted a constitutional means in achieving its concededly legitimate legislative goal.” United States v. Robel, 389 U.S. 258, 268 n.20 (1967). More recently, it stressed that “precedents, old and new, make clear that concerns of national security and foreign relations do not warrant abdication of the judicial role” to safeguard constitutional rights. Holder v. Humanitarian L. Project, 561 U.S. 1, 34 (2010); see also Sessions, 584 U.S. at 174–75 (holding unconstitutional an INA provision). Striking down a national defense statute on First Amendment grounds, the Court explained in Robel that “[i]t would indeed be ironic if, in the name of national defense, we would sanction the subversion of one of those liberties ... which makes the defense of the Nation worthwhile.” 389 U.S. at 264.

Amici anticipate the government may, as it has elsewhere, rely on authority addressing the exclusion of noncitizens (i.e., refusal to permit entry) rather than removal of lawfully present noncitizens. See, e.g., Br. for Appellant at 54–55, Am. Assoc. of Univ. Professors v. Rubio, Nos. 26-1141 & 26-1195 (1st Cir. July 6, 2026) (citing Dep’t of State v. Muñoz, 602 U.S. 899 (2024); Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972)). That authority is inapposite. As the Supreme Court explained, “[t]he distinction between an alien who has effected an entry into the United States and one who has never entered runs throughout immigration law.” Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 693 (2001). “The Supreme Court has consistently distinguished between aliens in the United States and those seeking to enter from outside the country, and has accorded to aliens living in the United States those protections of the Bill of Rights that are not, by the text of the Constitution, restricted to citizens.” AADC, 70 F.3d at 1063–64 (citing Kwong Hai Chew, 344 U.S. at 596 n.5).

The government also incorrectly asserts Harisiades v. Shaughnessy, 342 U.S. 580 (1952), supports its contention that it may deport noncitizens for otherwise lawful speech. See Br. for Appellant at 52, AAUP v. Rubio (1st Cir. July 6, 2026). Harisiades, applying First Amendment jurisprudence of the time, concluded the Constitution did not prohibit deportation for being a Communist Party member because citizens could be punished for the same affiliation. See 342 U.S. at 592 (citing Dennis v. United States, 341 U.S. 494 (1951)); see also 1 Smolla & Nimmer on Freedom of Speech § 10:19 (detailing how subsequent Supreme Court precedent limited Dennis). But that gets the government nothing. As the Ninth Circuit explained, “read properly, Harisiades establishes that deportation grounds are to be judged by the same standard applied to other burdens on First Amendment rights.” AADC, 70 F.3d at 1064 (internal quotation marks omitted).

The other authority the government has proffered [Br. for Appellant at 52, AAUP v. Rubio (1st Cir. July 6, 2026)], Turner v. Williams, 194 U.S. 279 (1904), is further afield because it involved deportation of an illegally present alien. See id. at 282 (explaining the arrest warrant noted the alien “came into this country contrary to the prohibition of the act of Congress of March 3, 1903”). The Supreme Court has recognized a “general rule” that illegally present noncitizens cannot assert a First Amendment defense against removal. Reno v. AADC, 525 U.S. 471, 491–92 (1999). Moreover, the deportation in Turner stemmed from the alien’s status as an anarchist, and American citizens at that time faced punishment for the same speech. See The New York Criminal Anarchy Act, 36 Harv. L. Rev. 199 (1922); David M. Rabban, The First Amendment in Its Forgotten Years, 90 Yale L.J. 514, 543–49 (1981) (surveying early 20th-century prosecutions for pro-anarchist advocacy).

Ultimately, the government has yet to supply any decision allowing deportation of a lawfully present noncitizen for speech that would be protected if uttered by an American citizen. That is because no such decision exists in the 250-year history of the Republic.

B. Deporting a Noncitizen for Speech is Forbidden Viewpoint Discrimination.

It is core First Amendment law that the government may not punish people because of their opinions. “If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation, it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion, or other matters of opinion” W. Va. State Bd. of Educ. v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 642 (1943). Thus, “it is a central tenet of the First Amendment that the government must remain neutral in the marketplace of ideas.” FCC v. Pacifica Found., 438 U.S. 726, 745–46 (1978).

That tenet means the government “must abstain from regulating speech when the specific motivating ideology or the opinion or perspective of the speaker is the rationale.” Rosenberger v. Rector & Visitors of Univ. of Va., 515 U.S. 819, 829 (1995). This is particularly true regarding “speech on public issues,” which “occupies the highest rung of the hierarchy of First Amendment values, and is entitled to special protection.” Snyder v. Phelps, 562 U.S. 443, 452 (2011) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); see also Citizens United v. FEC, 558 U.S. 310, 340 (2010) (“[P]olitical speech must prevail against laws that would suppress it.”). Viewpoint- and content-discriminatory laws are thus presumptively unconstitutional. Reed v. Town of Gilbert, 576 U.S. 155, 163 (2015).

Deporting a noncitizen based on speech necessarily discriminates based on viewpoint. Here, for example, the district court expressly found the government targeted pro-Palestinian speakers for deportation. AAUP v. Rubio, 802 F. Supp. 3d 120, 131 (D. Mass. 2025). The Supreme Court has made clear “[t]he State may not burden the speech of others in order to tilt public debate in a preferred direction.” Sorrell v. IMS Health Inc., 564 U.S. 552, 578–79 (2011). In Moody v. NetChoice, LLC, the Court re-emphasized that such “suppression of free expression” is never a “valid, let alone substantial” governmental interest. 603 U.S. 707, 740 (2024); see also Turner Broadcasting Sys., Inc. v. FCC, 512 U.S. 622, 641 (1994) (“Government action that stifles speech on account of its message ... pose[s] the inherent risk that the Government seeks not to advance a legitimate regulatory goal, but to suppress unpopular ideas or information or manipulate the public debate through coercion rather than persuasion.”). By targeting pro-Palestinian speakers for deportation, that is precisely what the government has done and is doing here.

C. Deporting Noncitizens Based on Speech Amounts to Unconstitutional Retaliation.

Targeting noncitizens for deportation based on their viewpoints is also textbook unlawful retaliation. The “First Amendment prohibits government officials from retaliating against individuals for engaging in protected speech.” Lozman v. Riviera Beach, 585 U.S. 87, 90 (2018). Unlawful retaliation occurs when, after an individual engages in protected conduct, the government takes an adverse action against them, and “the defendants’ adverse actions were substantially motivated against the plaintiff[s] exercise of constitutionally protected conduct.” Bailey v. Iles, 87 F.4th 275, 289 (5th Cir. 2023) (quoting Keenan v. Tejada, 290 F.3d 252, 258 (5th Cir. 2002)). Action is retaliatory when it is sufficient to “chill a person of ordinary firmness from continuing to engage in that activity.” Id.

Deporting noncitizens based on speech ticks each unconstitutional box. Protest and advocacy on a matter of public concern is quintessential protected speech. Edwards v. South Carolina, 372 U.S. 229, 235 (1963).

There can be no doubt deportation would deter a person of ordinary firmness from speaking. And causation is satisfied due to the reliance on protected speech. The government supplies no justification for excluding immigration enforcement from bedrock First Amendment principles.

III. Allowing the Government to Deport Speakers Deemed Contrary to the National Interest is an Un-American Approach to Speech.

Allowing the Secretary of State to retaliate against speakers if he deems it in the national interest would place the United States among strange bedfellows when it comes to freedom of speech. For example, Article 51 of China's Constitution provides that individual liberty gives way if the government decides the expression "undermine[s] the interests of the state." Xianfa art. 51 (1982).⁸ Russia's laws, too, permit "[r]estriction of access to information" in the name of protecting "morality," its system of government, and the "security of the state." Federal Law of the Russian Federation on Information, Informational Technologies and the Protection of Information [Russian Federation

⁸ Available at: https://english.www.gov.cn/archive/lawsregulations/201911/20/content_WS5ed8856ec6d0b3f0e9499913.html [<https://perma.cc/D8DG-5RSH>].

Collection of Legislation] 2006, No. 31, Item 3448.⁹ And Saudi Arabia prohibits expression that serves any “foreign interest” conflicting with the “national interest” or that “stir[s] up discord among citizens.” Law of Printing and Publication (Royal Decree No. M/32, 3/9/1424 H), art. 9 (2003).¹⁰

As China’s, Russia’s, and Saudi Arabia’s experiences show, giving the government the power to censor when it believes speech threatens the government’s “interests” is a loophole with infinite diameter. It has no place in America’s tradition of individual liberty.

America has charted a different course than the world’s censorial kings and authoritarian regimes. In 1801, President Thomas Jefferson used his first inaugural address to defend the free speech rights of those who called for dissolution of the Union. He proclaimed, “If there be any among us who would wish to dissolve this Union, or to change its republican form, let them stand undisturbed as monuments of the safety with which error of opinion may be tolerated, where reason is left free to combat it.”¹¹ Little could be more dangerous to the interests of a fledgling nation than calling for its extinction, yet our commitment to free speech remained. So it should today, 225 years later.

⁹ Available at: https://www.wto.org/english/thewto_e/acc_e/rus_e/wtaccrus58_leg_369.pdf [<https://perma.cc/GW9F-C78F>].

¹⁰ Available at: <https://www.saudiembassy.net/law-printing-and-publication> [<https://perma.cc/PG92-U2F4>].

CONCLUSION

The freedom of foreign nationals lawfully residing in the United States is not “dependent upon their conformity to the popular notions of the moment,” because the First Amendment “belongs to them as well as to all citizens.” Wixon, 326 U.S. at 166 (Murphy, J., concurring). The government’s position is contrary to more than two centuries of American commitment to free and open expression. This Court should re-affirm that the First Amendment protects noncitizens engaging in lawful speech, vacate the BIA’s decision, and terminate removal proceedings.

Dated: August 21, 2026

/s/ Conor T. Fitzpatrick

Conor T. Fitzpatrick

FOUNDATION FOR INDIVIDUAL

RIGHTS AND EXPRESSION

700 Pennsylvania Ave. SE, Ste. 340

Washington, DC 20003

(215) 717-3473

Counsel for Amici Curiae

¹¹ Thomas Jefferson, First Inaugural Address (Mar. 4, 1801), reprinted by Nat’l Archives: Founders Online [<https://perma.cc/647Z-7LP9>].

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE WITH TYPE-VOLUME LIMIT

This document complies with the word limit of Fed. R. App. P. 29(a)(5) because, excluding the parts of the document exempted by Fed. R. App. P. 32(f), this document contains 6,488 words.

This document complies with the typeface requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(5) and the type-style requirements of Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(6) because this brief has been prepared in a proportionally spaced typeface using Microsoft Word in Century Schoolbook 14-point font.

Dated: August 21, 2026

/s/ Conor T. Fitzpatrick

Conor T. Fitzpatrick
FOUNDATION FOR INDIVIDUAL
RIGHTS AND EXPRESSION

Counsel for Amici Curiae

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

The undersigned certifies that on August 21, 2026, an electronic copy of the Brief of Amici Curiae Foundation for Individual Rights and Expression, Cato Institute, PEN America, National Coalition Against Censorship, First Amendment Lawyers Association, and The Rutherford Institute, in Support of Petitioner was filed with the Clerk of Court for the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit using the CM/ECF system. The undersigned also certifies all parties in this case are represented by counsel who are registered CM/ECF users, and that service of the brief will be accomplished by the CM/ECF system.

Dated: August 21, 2026

/s/ Conor T. Fitzpatrick

Conor T. Fitzpatrick
FOUNDATION FOR INDIVIDUAL
RIGHTS AND EXPRESSION

Counsel for Amici Curiae