

September 28, 2026

Ambassador Sidharto Reza Suryodipuro
President of the UN Human Rights Council
Via e-mail: hrcpresidency@un.org

RE: U.S. Civil Society Requesting Urgent Action on U.S. Non-cooperation with the UPR

Your Excellency,

We, the undersigned representatives of civil society organizations in the United States, condemn the U.S. for its persistent non-cooperation with the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) process, and urge you to take meaningful action within your mandate to prevent the attempted dismantling of the universality of a core pillar of the UN Human Rights Council. The U.S.' withdrawal from the UPR, which is a deliberate attack on the mechanism, should be understood in the context of the Trump administration's consistent disregard for the rule of law and accountability, and disdain for the United Nations' human rights system and multilateralism more generally. Such concerted efforts by the U.S. to avoid peer review of systemic and acute human rights violations not only has immediate consequences for targeted individuals and communities, but also reinforces impunity and profoundly undermines human rights protections worldwide.

The HRC must take concrete action to preserve the universality of the UPR and develop a principled approach that will prevent further evasion of this crucial peer review process by member states. Moreover, all UN member states must respond to the present effort of the U.S. to reject participation in the UPR with increased scrutiny to reinforce for all states that they cannot evade peer evaluation of their human rights record.

While the U.S. administration has withdrawn from the UN Human Rights Council and refused to participate in the UPR process, human rights advocates, community-based organizations, and civil society actors across the U.S. have documented over the last two years a severe degradation of human rights in the country. Civil society submitted a record 155 stakeholder reports to inform the UPR process in 2025, prior to the U.S.' disengagement, of which 60 were updated in April 2026 on the dangerous escalation of violations committed by the U.S. in the past year. Such documentation, and particularly the testimonies of impacted people through reports and additional public briefings including the People's UPR in October 2025, creates a robust historical record for the Council and must inform the urgency and scope of your intervention. Furthermore, several UN special procedures, the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination and the High Commissioner for Human Rights have urgently raised serious concerns related to human rights violations in the United States.

The reports, updates and communications draw international attention to the administration's failure to protect the rights of Indigenous communities; the mass and illegal detention and deportation scheme that violates the human rights of migrants, asylum seekers and refugees; the extrajudicial killings of over 223 people in the Caribbean and East Pacific under the false claim of countering “narcoterrorism”; and violations of domestic and international law in Venezuela and Iran. They also highlight the continuation or exacerbation of systemic injustices of the criminal legal system, including the practice of forced prison labor and extreme sentences such as death by incarceration; the dismantling of voting rights; historic funding cuts and restructuring of public health coverage and nutrition assistance programs that undermine access to adequate food and lifesaving healthcare; water injustices and denial of food sovereignty as a manifestation of environmental racism; U.S. complicity in advancing or committing violations of domestic and international law in Gaza, including via the ongoing transfer of arms; the regression on reproductive rights and bodily autonomy; and the criminalization of homelessness and poverty. At the same time, the Trump administration is engaged in a dramatic crackdown on civil society organizations that are politically disfavored precisely for human rights advocacy, and is actively seeking to eliminate or upend programs designed to address structural racism and discrimination against minoritized and racialized groups. Civil society is particularly concerned with the Trump administration’s expansion of the “terrorism” framework and vast surveillance infrastructure used to repress expression and dissent, target civil society and marginalized communities and chill human rights work.

In this critical moment, and given the global impact of policies and actions taken by the U.S. government, all stakeholders must act to the fullest extent of their authority. Specifically, we request that you:

1. Schedule a dedicated debate on U.S. non-cooperation with the UPR during the 64th session of the Human Rights Council, with participation by relevant independent experts and civil society;
2. Issue a Presidential Statement requesting that the Office of the High Commissioner prepare a report on U.S. non-cooperation with the UPR, as well as the human rights situation in the country, with recommendations to the Human Rights Council as to the progressive steps that could be taken to respond to such persistent non-cooperation, including through the establishment of appropriate independent monitoring and reporting mechanisms, such as a Special Rapporteur or Fact-Finding body.
3. Deliver a statement expressing public concern in September during general agenda item 6, that the U.S. must reverse course and participate in its scheduled review in November, acknowledging that the state’s non-cooperation comes amidst credible reports by civil society and impacted advocates of a grave and deteriorating human rights situation in the country.
4. Issue an additional public statement should the U.S. persist in its non-participation after its scheduled review in November.

Despite real risk of retaliation and retribution, the undersigned civil society organizations reaffirm our commitment to universal human rights and are prepared to engage in every international effort to hold our government accountable and to achieve justice, safety and flourishing of our communities.

Sincerely,

Afghan Legal Empowerment Portal
American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU)
American Friends Service Committee
Artistic Freedom Initiative
CEDAW Rising
Center for Constitutional Rights
Center for Gender & Refugee Studies
Center for Global Law & Justice,
Northeastern School of Law
Center for Victims of Torture
Children's Rights
CIVICUS
Community Justice Project
Council for Global Equality
CPIC NOW
Desiree Alliance
Earth Neighborhood Productions
Equality Now
Florida Coalition to Advance Racial Equity
Gender Justice Clinic at Cornell Law School
Global Justice Center
Global Rights Advocacy
Growing Hope
Guttmacher Institute
Human Rights and Gender Justice Clinic
Human Rights at Home Litigation Clinic at Saint Louis University School of Law
Human Rights Cities Alliance
Human Rights First
If/When/How: Lawyering for Reproductive Justice
International Association of Charities (AIC)
International Human Rights Clinic, Santa
Clara University School of Law
Ipas US
Just Ground

Malcolm X Center for Self Determination
Met Council on Housing Research and Education Fund
Muslim Advocates
National Birth Equity Collaborative
National Homelessness Law Center
National Lawyers Guild - International
Committee
Native Justice, LLC
Physicians for Human Rights
Pittsburgh Human Rights City Alliance
Project South
Reproductive Justice Action Collective (ReJAC)
Rhode Island Food Policy Council
Robert & Ethel Kennedy Human Rights
Center
Safe Space Fort Smith
Santa Clara Law - International Human Rights Clinic
Sisters of Charity Federation
Southern Border Communities Coalition
Taxpayers Against Genocide
The Advocates for Human Rights
The Alliance for Diplomacy and Justice
The Southern Poverty Law Center
Transcending Women
University Network for Human Rights
University of Miami School of Law
Human Rights Clinic
Women Advancing Nutrition Dietetics
and Agriculture (WANDA)
Women's All Points Bulletin (WAPB)
Woodhull Freedom Foundation